Our Town Nov. 29, 2012

"Do you know," said Rocky to the Soupster, whom he had trapped in the supermarket's canned-beans-and-tomato aisle, "that when they recently measured the major U.S. cities to see which was the laziest, they counted how many people wear sweatpants?"

"Couldn't those people just be returning from the gym?" the Soupster asked.

Rocky reached forward and vigorously snapped the elastic waistband of the navy blue sweatpants the Soupster wore. "Were you just returning from the gym?" he asked, pithily.

"Well..." said the Soupster.

"Wearing sweatpants may be a sign of the decline of the American Century," wailed Rocky.

"You're taking this extremely seriously," the Soupster told him. "They're just cheap, comfortable pants."

"You'll see," said Rocky, turning the corner and heading for the dog food aisle.

Rocky had his effect. The Soupster suddenly felt naked in his sweat pants. He wore the indelible proof of his sloth, visible to everyone. And what was worse, the place where Rocky had snapped his waistband did not go back to its normal shape. Now his pants felt like they were starting to slip.

The Soupster had stopped wearing sweatpants until they fell apart (although he was still tolerably tolerant of sock holes). He had stopped wearing light blue or gymnasium grey sweats, figuring black and navy were more respectful.

Respectful! So he did feel apologetic. And as the idea formed in his brain, it felt as though the waistband of his now-cursed pants slid down another half inch.

The Soupster cradled the can of beans and two cans of tomatoes in one arm and yanked his waistband up with the other hand. But as even the Soupster knew, yanking up one side of a pair of sagging sweatpants does not help them stay up – it may even be counterproductive.

Those who know, know that the worst sweatpant accidents occur soon after trying to yank the pants up by one side. The Soupster would take no chances. He held up the sweatpants at the waist with one hand, while he paid for his groceries and carried out the bag in his other hand.

There's a walk you can do to minimize the pants' desire to slip and the Soupster did it. Yet, by the time he reached the side of his car, it was but his hand that held the pants aloft.

He should have put the grocery bag down and used that hand to fiddle with the car door handle. He should have kept his grip on his waistband no matter what. And he certainly should have looked around before he embarked on any plan to get the groceries into the car and keep his pants up. But he didn't.

The Soupster let go of his waistband to open the car door and his pants slid all the way down to his ankles.

Rocky, who had left the store behind the Soupster, walked over and stared wordlessly. Finally, he spoke. "Soupster," said Rocky, "Even for you, this is low."

ments for commercial fishing vessels. Participants practice hands-on in the water and on a vessel, with emergency equipment that should be onboard any commercial fishing or other sizeable vessel — PFDs, life rafts, immersion suits, EPIRBs, fire extinguishers, and practice emergency procedures like man overboard, abandon ship, fire fighting and flooding control. AMSEA will also be offering its Upright & Watertight: Stability Awareness & Damage Control course which covers basic stability principles, the effects of common fishing practices on stability, interpreting stability guidance and includes practice with damage control techniques. This course will be offered on Dec. 9 & Jan. 17 at NSRAA. Both of these courses are FREE to commercial fishermen thanks to

The Sitka Monthly Grind announces the first ever Circus Grind, Sat. Dec. 8 at the Sheet Ka Kwann Naa Kahidi. Doors open at 6:30pm and the show starts at 7pm. We sell out so get your tickets early at Old Harbor Books. Cost is $5 for adults $1 for children or free with a plate of homemade desserts. For those bringing a dessert you must purchase a ticket in advance and will be reimbursed at the door. We encourage you to bring a cup to help reduce the trash. This Monthly Grind promises an evening of juggling, unicycling, amazing escape acts and other never before seen acts in Sitka. More info call Jeff at 747-4821 Ad#41482

We are now accepting 2013 Sitka Green Business Award nominations and we hope to hear from you by Dec. 1! If you have questions or further suggestions, please contact me by phone (747-2708), email (mupere@alaska.net), or mail (131 Shelikof Way, Sitka). If you perform additional green practices that we do not list, please let us know what they are! We will continue to update our list annually. Thanks again and looking forward to hearing from you, Michelle Putz, SGWG/SS leader Ad#94984
