The Soupster mulls politics

"Tighten that line, would you Soupster?" said Sara Paley, leaning out of the cockpit of her 25-foot cruiser, Knot For Naught. She climbed up on the deck, leaped and planted her Xtra Tuffs on the dock. She checked the line aft.

"Nice boat," said the Soupster, who was in the harbor aimlessly boat-gazing.

"Knot?" Sara said, temporarily confusing him. "Yeah, I love Knot."

"The name of your boat – I mean a lot of people associate that with Sarah Palin. She said during her 2008 campaign that she hoped all her efforts were `Not for naught.' And do you spell naught with an `o' or with an `a'?"

"Either," said Sara, "or both. Anyway, it steams me up."

"What steams you up?" asked the Soupster.

"I got Knot in 2000, long before Palin said anything about being naught," said Sara. "I didn't get the name from anyone."

"Well," said the Soupster. "Your own name, er, Sara Paley, kind of gets people thinking of Sarah Palin."

"Well, I'm older than her – so even my name is older than her! I'm tired of being accused of stealing her line."

The Soupster rocked back on his heels and sought to change topics. "How about those Millennials on the Assembly," he said.

"That some religious group?" Sara asked. "Millennials," recited the Soupster from his mental Wikipedia. "People born between 1980 and 2000, roughly. The two new members of our Assembly are Millennials."

"Should I be alarmed?" asked Sara.

"Maybe," said the Soupster. "Millennials are supposed to be open-minded, confident and tolerant.

"That sounds like the good news," she said.

"Well, Millennials are also supposed to be narcissistic, with a wicked sense of entitlement."

"Sounds like my cat," said Sara. As if on cue, Fancy Pants, Knot For Naught's black-and-white splotched resident feline, jumped up on the railing. Sara scratched Fancy's black-and-white splotched head.

"Millennials are supposed to be pragmatic idealists," the Soupster continued. "So we may be hearing more talk about things like generating energy from the tides. They're called `digital natives' – born to computers – so I wouldn't be surprised at electronic voting."

"How do you know all this?" said Sara, eyeing the Soupster up and down. "You look like a Baby Boomer to me."

"Well, I'm no Millennial," the Soupster said. "I took an online quiz that said you had Millennial values if you scored at least 73 out of 100 points."

"How did you do?" asked Sara.

"I scored a four," the Soupster said.

Like to write an Our Town? It must be 450-500 words long & closely connected with the life of Sitkans. The Soupster must make an appearance in the story – even minor. If we run your story, we will pay $50. To submit: Email the story to: shop@sitkasoup.com and put "Our Town" in the Subject line. Or call 747-7595.

That penalty may be as low as $95 per adult, half that for children, or 1% of your income, whichever is higher. Those that do not have health insurance in 2015 will face penalties when filing taxes in 2016. For more information, please call Andrea Thomas at 966-8883 or at andreat@searhc.org. Ad#594540

SEARHC would like to remind everyone that now is the time to get vaccinated against the influenza virus. Contrary to the belief by some that influenza is simply a bad cold, the influenza virus, commonly referred to as "the flu" is much more serious. Each year approximately 200,000 people in the U.S. are hospitalized from the flu and nearly 36,000 people die because of it. Elders and other high-risk groups are particularly susceptible to serious complications from the flu.Ad#711543

Marine Research

In association with Sitka Whalefest (sitkawhalefest.org), UAS, Sitka is offering three courses for college credit and one educational career advancement course. *1.*Teachers needing credits for educational career advancement can take the 1-credit Current Topics in Marine Research (ED593) course Nov. 7, 8 and 9. 2. Anyone who wishes to broaden his or her exposure to the sciences can get 1 college credit by choosing Current Topics in Marine Research (BIOL 175) Nov. 7, 8, and 9. Cost is $185. Housing is available at the Sitka Fine Arts Camp – 4 nights for $25 per night if course version T02 is selected at time of registration. Both classes are similar: students will attend all nine of the Whalefest sessions, and then join the visiting scientists in stimulating discussion following their presentations. See sitkawhalefest.org for details. 3. Introduction to Alaska Aquaculture (FT193P) is geared toward high school students. This 1-credit workshop will occur in the mornings from Nov 4-6, (the days preceding Whalefest). They will learn how salmon enhancement works in Alaska, and the science and ecology of Alaska fisheries. 4. Intro to Molecular Techniques for Management of Marine Mammals and Fisheries (BIOL 193) Focus on the principles and procedures of DNA extraction, gene amplification (PCR), and gel electrophoresis

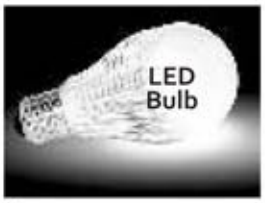
Light Bulbs



American inventor Thomas Edison developed the incandescent light bulb in 1879 • Incandescent bulbs are not efficient -- only 10 percent of their energy comes as light, the other 90 percent as heat • New compact fluorescent bulbs are much more efficient, with 75 percent of their energy coming as light. LED (light emitting diode) bulbs are even more efficient and can shine continuously for 10 years or longer • They use little computer chips to direct energy • But LED bulbs have to be kept cool, the same as computers.
