Our Town Nov. 19, 2015

The Soupster spends time at the edge of generational change

In her years of teaching history at Our Town High, Mrs. Frost never had a more annoying student than Caine McDuff. He didn't act openly disruptive in class, but somehow still managed to disrupt. Mrs. Frost operated a lot on instinct and Caine had always made her feel off-balance.

Lord knew Caine had been bright enough – too bright, maybe, for someone whose goodwill other people doubted. He asked a lot of questions – most of the bright kids did – but he always seemed to know the answer already. It was as though he was testing her knowledge and, frankly, it gave her the creeps.

Caine didn't seem to have friends -- there was an invisible fence that put off others, as it did her. But he was not disrespected. In fact, when Caine spoke no one else did until he was clearly finished. Caine often had the last word on things.

Caine graduated and moved on, like they all did, and Mrs. Frost proceeded to instruct scores more Our Town High students over the decades. She did not ask about Caine, as she did so many others.

Nevertheless, she thought of Caine more than once, usually when some annoyance set her off balance in that familiar way.

Mrs. Frost retired from teaching. Mrs. Frost's husband, Mr. Frost, snagged an engineering job that meant two years in Guatemala. Mrs. Frost did not like humidity and decided she would stay behind. He needed the adventure and she looked forward to the peace and quiet.

But she did not count on the boredom. Not long after Mr. Frost departed, Mrs. Frost felt at loose ends. Maybe it was time to step up to the plate, citizen-wise? On her best friend Gladys' suggestion, Mrs. Frost joined the Planning Commission.

Now Mrs. Frost knew there was nothing more interesting than history – the twists and turns the human animal has used to scheme his or her way through the millennia. And she enjoyed the commission's small canvas – decisions that affected just one or two people, a neighborhood.

At a Planning Commission meeting six months into her term, Mrs. Frost listened as the Soupster and a few others came to support a neighbor who wanted to build a greenhouse and sell vegetables. Mrs. Frost liked the smooth, pleasant neighborliness of the proceedings – most of the proceedings went the same. But the meetings didn't dislodge her boredom as much as she had wished when she joined.

Lost in thought, she did not notice the coolness that descended as two competing attorneys representing two property owners moved to the front of the room. The first attorney was from Juneau. The second attorney was a newly minted Caine McDuff, Esquire.

Commissioner Brick Takamata, who sat next to Mrs. Frost, leaned over. "Looks like one of your old students is here. Isn't he the one you said gave you trouble."

"Trouble, yes, but interesting trouble," Mrs. Frost whispered back. "Let's hear what he has to say."

Jacobs: The Life and Works of a Sitka Master Tlingit Artist on Mon, Nov 23 at 7pm. at the Sitka National Historical Park visitor center. Jim Jacobs (1846-1941), often known as Silver Jim, was a master Tlingit artist of the Koosk'eidi clan, Xhaas hit of Sitka. His Tlingit names were Yéilnaawú and Kíchxhaak. This presentation seeks to acknowledge the life and work of Silver Jim, the contexts of Tlingit art, and his place in Alaskan and Northwest Coast art history. Zachary R. Jones is an Archivist II at the Alaska State Archives and Adjunct Instructor of History/ Anthropology at University of Alaska Southeast. Jones is also a Ph.D. candidate in Ethnohistory at University of Alaska Fairbanks. Ad#320563

Wanted

UAS is seeking a spring semester host family (or single adult) for our German exchange student, who is studying and working at the university this year. Alex is a 20-year old male student from Dillingen, Bavaria here to study and gain work experience in IT. He has been in Sitka since August and is enjoying his time here, eager to find a American host family with whom to share in an intercultural home experience. Alex is quiet, clean, and a non-smoker with no allergies. Hosts provide a private bedroom and the equivalent of two meals per day. A $225

Octopus

ROBOT OCTOPUS

DO YOU WANT TO DANCE?

IT CAME FROM BENEATH THE SEA

Octopuses live only in salt water, but they live in oceans all over the world • In warm waters, the octopuses are small • Where the water is cold, the octopuses are big! • The largest octopus is the Pacific octopus, which can weigh more than 30 lbs. • Octopuses have large eyes and excellent vision, but they are deaf • If an octopus is attacked it will shoot out black ink to make it hard to see and then escape using jets of water.
