Our Town June 1, 2017 The Soupster experiences hot gossip and hotter grub

At a table at Our Town's new Indian/Pakistani restaurant, Naan Plus, the Soupster sucked on an ice cube to cool his mouth from a fiery vindaloo. Sweat dripped off the tip of his nose and his eyes teared freely.

"So hot!" the Soupster croaked.

His tablemate, Sally Crewsin, had ordered the milder biryani and looked at him with sympathy. "At least this lunch is free," she said.

Sally was paying the tab to reward the Soupster for helping her sell her house. She had placed a classified ad in the Soupster's eponymous publication and had three offers in one week. Of course, blonde and bright-eyed Sally had a house as adorable as she was and the price she asked was more than reasonable.

"Hey, Soupster," she said to change the subject from agony and hellfire to something less uncomfortable. "Why did you name the Soup the Soup?"

"I didn't name it," the Soupster gasped, inexplicably still eating his volcanic entrée, despite the pain. "Rolene did. She started the Soup and sold it to me."

Rolene Bently occupied the body of a middle-aged woman, but had the soul of a frontier pioneer. She was a serial entrepreneur, starting several businesses and then selling them when a newer idea consumed her instead.

"She named the Sitka Soup after her grandmother's soup, which was made out of whatever was on hand right then. In the early days when the Soup was wildly unpredictable, the name made even more sense."

"Rolene was something else, you bet," said Sally. "Did you know she was doing a kind of Airbnb before they invented Airbnb?"

The Soupster nodded and chuckled.

"Rolene had a list of people with spare rooms and would hook up lodging-seeking visitors to Our Town," Sally said. "Then she moved on to cars and boats. At the height of her popularity, Rolene oversaw land and sea fleets worthy of a military operation. She kept it all straight."

"Where is Rolene now?" asked the Soupster.

"Somewhere in Wyoming," said Sally.

"No doubt organizing cowboys into some sort of Ranchbnb," said the Soupster.

The waiter came with their third dish, a creamy sauce with visible pieces of chicken.

"It's tikka masala – some people call it butter chicken and it's very mild," said Sally. "It's more popular in Britain now than fish 'n chips."

The Soupster moaned with relief as the creamy sauce coated his overheated mouth. He pushed the spicy vindaloo to the side. "I'll eat no more of that," he said.

"Another of Rolene's obsessions was food waste," said Sally. "I bet she would be able to find somebody who wanted your remaining vindaloo. I bet you'd be willing to trade the vindaloo for more tikka masala."

"Or an ice cold glass of milk," said the Soupster, whose mouth still smarted.

"Rolene would call it Leftoversbnb," said Sally.

Children

The Summer Library Program begins at Sitka Public Library on Saturday, June 3 with a delightful classic tale brought to life with beautiful wooden marionettes. Stevens Puppets are back this summer at the Sitka Public Library and they are headlining their latest production of "THE SLEEPING BEAUTY". The free performance starts at 10:30am The program's is 45 minutes and best for children 6 years or older. The music in this production is entirely from "The Sleeping Beauty Suite" composed in 1890 by Pyotr Ilyich Tchaikovsky. After the performance children, teen and adults will be able to register to participate in the annual Summer Library Program that will run until Aug. 12. Steven Puppets has been brought to Sitka through a grant supported with Library Services and Technology Act funding provided by the Federal Institute Tern Festival will take place June 1-4, 2017. The festival is a celebration of the natural and cultural resources of Yakutat, Alaska. Yakutat hosts one of the largest and southern most known nesting colonies of Aleutian Terns, as well as Arctic Terns and up to 200 other bird species that nest in or migrate through the area. The festival is family friendly and offers activities for birders as well as non-birders, including field trips, seminars, kid's activities, evening banquets and other programs, music, and art. This year's keynote speaker is Dr. Julia K. Parrish, the Lowell A. and Frankie L. Wakefield Professor of Ocean Fishery Sciences at the University of Washington, where she also serves as Associate Dean for Academic Affairs in the College of the Environment, and the Executive Director of the Coastal Observation and Seabird Survey Team (COASST). Our featured artist is violinist Linda Rosenthal. Please see www.yakutatfestival.org, visit us on Facebook, or call (907) 784-3359 for more information. Julia K. Parrish is a Lowell A. and Frankie L. Wakefield Professor of Ocean Fishery Sciences, and the Associate Dean of the College of the Environment, at the University of Washington. She is also the Executive Director of the Coastal Observation and Seabird Survey Team (COASST), the largest beached bird program in the world. Are you renovating your home? The Sitka Kitch community rental commercial kitchen, located at First Presbyterian Church, is seeking donations of a gently used refrigerator that is working, clean and energy-efficient, and less than 10 years old. The donated refrigerator will be used by the Sitka Kitch to hold food for classes, entrepreneurs who are renting the Kitch as a maker-space, and the church's soup kitchen. The refrigerator will become church property, and any end-of-year tax donation will be through the church. For more information, contact Kristy Miller at the church at millerkris50@gmail.com or 747-3356. For more information about the Sitka Kitch, go to <http://www.sitkakitch.org>. Ad#250591

Radio is a way to send electromagnetic waves through the air • Although radio waves were discovered earlier, an Italian scientist named Guglielmo Marconi invented the first working radio • The first users of radio communication were ships at sea. Before the invention of television, people would gather around the radio and listen to shows and news programs together • Microwaves that cook your food, police walkie talkies and cell phones all use kinds of radio waves.
