The Soupster juggled in his arms: a half gallon of milk, some donuts, a box of cereal, bananas and a jar of salty Greek olives. He had come in for the donuts and unconsciously filled his arms with items as he wandered around the store, greeting the large number of people he knew.

Then he got in line.

"Soupster," said Stevarino, the shipwright, next in line, whose real name was Stefan. "Could you hold my stuff, too, while you got so much in your arms."

"If I really don't want to buy anything, I have to take a shopping cart," chuckled the Soupster. "If my arms are free, I will fill them with groceries."

"Primordial," Stevarino said. "Grazing behavior – like cows in the pasture. Fulfilling the Prime Directive, as Captain Kirk used to say."

"Speaking of philosophical," said the Soupster, reaching into Stevarino's cart and picking out a dozen free range eggs. "Which came first, the chicken or the egg?"

Stevarino laughed.

"No, really," said the Soupster. "I just spent most of Saturday helping this crazy woman put up a whole display of chicken-and-egg items in the big glass cases at the entrance to the library. Every item incorporates both a chicken and an egg. And thus, each item incorporates the question – 'Which came first, the chicken or the egg?'"

"I think it depends on how you approach the answer," said the always-philosophical Chickens and eggs?

Stevarino. "If you're talking about genes, for instance, the egg came first. Something that was almost a chicken genetically – but not quite – laid an egg which would develop into something that was just barely a chicken in genetic terms. What grew from the egg was technically a chicken, while what laid the egg was not. The egg came first."

"Or," Stevarino continued. "A religious person would say the chicken came first. That even if God created the egg first, what He ultimately was creating was a chicken. The egg was just the means to an end. He had in His mind the plan for a chicken and the egg was just where He started the cycle of chicken creation."

"I see," said the Soupster. "What the question is really asking is not 'which came first, the chicken or the egg?' but 'which came first, the design or the creation?'"

"The Creation," said Stevarino, "Don't get me started."

"You're next, Soupster," said Bess, the checker, a little loudly, since she knew she had to pierce her voice through all of the two philosophers' ponderous thoughts.

"Gotta go," said the Soupster.

"Oooh," said Stevarino. "I'm having a Sitka moment. I can see about 18 people shopping, in line or working here and I know everyone's first name. Where does that happen?"

"Only in Our Town, that I know of," said the Soupster.

additional security, increased safety, and improved patient experience Mt. Edgecumbe Hospital (MEH) recently installed and deployed the Hugs Wi-Fi Infant Protection solution, along with the matching mother/infant component of the Hugs system; Kisses® Mother as an additional layer of security in its Labor and Delivery Department. The Hugs technology is a comprehensive infant security system that protects newborns against the risk of abduction not only in the Labor and Delivery Department but anywhere in the hospital covered by Wi-Fi. Each infant wears a tiny Hugs Wi-Fi tag on his or her ankle attached with a special tamper-detecting band. Protection of the baby begins immediately once the tag is attached. The Hugs system provides some unique benefits including hospital-wide infant security by monitoring all exits. The status and location of infants can be tracked anywhere within the hospital's Wi-Fi coverage, and exits remain protected even if communication to the hospital's server is temporarily interrupted. And, infants detected outside the Labor and Delivery unit with no record of a staff member transporting the baby to another area of the hospital automatically triggers an alarm. MEH also added the Kisses® component of the Hugs system to match newborn babies to their mothers automatically to further augment security for each infant. Each mother receives a Kisses tag which is programmed to be "bonded" with her baby's Hugs tag to wear around her wrist. Whenever the two tags meet anywhere in the hospital, the Hugs tag checks for a proper match to the individually programmed Kisses® tag worn by the baby's mother. When a match is verified, the tags make a specific sound letting staff know the infant is with his or her mother. Charles Clement, SouthEast Alaska Regional Health Consortium President, and CEO said, "SEARHC takes our patients' safety, security, and protection seriously, and protecting the infants born at Mt. Edgecumbe Hospital is critically important. Providing Hugs and Kisses as an additional safeguard to the newborns in our care is just one of the recent upgrades we have implemented at MEH, and our staff continues to seek innovative solutions, educational opportunities, and technology to advance the medical care and experience we provide to our patients." Herring & Other Local Food

Herring Appreciation Class With Renée Trafton

Renée Jakaitis Trafton, the chef-owner of the Beak Restaurant, will teach the fifth class in the Sitka Kitch's new class series, Seasonal Cooking, from 6-8:30 p.m. on Tuesday, April 3, at the Sitka Kitch community rental commercial kitchen. The class is called Herring Appreciation With Renée Trafton. Renée will teach students how to make a herring egg salad and sushi. Due to the vagaries of the seasons in Sitka, this class will be moved to April 10 if the herring are running late (students will be notified and refunds will be available for students who can't make the later date).

✚ SITKA COMMUNITY HOSPITAL

SITKA COMMUNITY HOSPITAL WELCOMES SURGEON DONOVAN BLAND, MD.

Dr. Bland will be practicing the month of March 2018.

Dr. Donovan Bland, board certified general surgeon, became a physician because it allows him to help others. He chose General Surgery because it was a surgeon who helped Dr. Bland's mother become a breast cancer survivor.

His philosophy is if you take good care of people, they will come back to you. He is committed to doing the best he can and doing what is right for the patient.

Dr. Bland treats his patients as he would want his family treated and believes this comes across to his patients through his care.

As a surgeon, he uses minimally invasive techniques whenever appropriate. These "laparoscopic" procedures use small holes instead of large incisions which typically mean less pain and scarring for the patient.

In his free time, Dr. Bland likes to hike with his dogs, enjoys making and flying kites, restoring furniture, water color painting and photography.

READY FOR SPRING?

GREEN THUMB?

MY BEST HARVEST IN YEARS!

Sitka doesn't get much sunshine, but that doesn't mean that plants and flowers don't grow here • Some people grow their own food. Others grow plants for their beauty • Later on, the Sitka Farmer's Market will open and some people will sell vegetables that they grow • A group of people are trying to grow apple trees in Sitka. Kelp is a good food, it can be used as a fertilizer and to protect plants from cold weather.
