Our Town May 31, 2018

Originally published July 12, 2012

The Soupster is called out on his talkativeness & put to the test.

Carrie told the Soupster he talked too much and her criticism stung. The Soupster knew he could go on and on – maybe a tiny, little bit? -- but he didn't know his friend had been suffering. And for "quite a while," no less.

"I bet you can't keep your conversation to a minimum even for one day," Carrie threw down the gauntlet. "Not even for one whole day."

"I can," the Soupster insisted. "And I will!"

Today was the day. The first mission of the new, zip-lipped Soupster was to check the mail at the post office. As the Soupster strolled downtown, he had to duck into a few storefronts to avoid fellow chatterboxes who might stress-test his mettle.

"Soupman!" The call came from Charlie, a hiking buddy who, unfortunately, happened to be in a store the Soupster had judged free of customers. "Tell me what's new with the Man in the Can?"

"Not much," said the Soupster, wishing he could have thought of a one-word answer. "Gotta go," he said slipping out of the store.

Out of the frying pan and into the fire? Two busfuls of visitors hit the sidewalk and poured around the Soupster like a human wave.

Hide in plain sight? The Soupster pulled his cap low on his forehead and attempted to avoid eye contact with the cheery migrants surrounding him.

No use! The Soupster felt his lapels being patted and looked down into the face of an older man wearing a tag that said, "Hi! I'm Horace!"

"Hi, I'm Horace," he stated the obvious, grasping the Soupster's hand and shaking it vigorously. "I'm new to these shores."

"Hi, Horace," said the Soupster.

"Yup, this is some different place," Horace said. "Where's all the big box chain stores? Don't you have any big box chain stores?"

"Nope," said the Soupster.

"Our bus driver said he was taking us all over town but we only went five or six miles one way and then seven or eight the other. That can't be all the road you have."

"Yup," said the Soupster, zipping his lips so tight he could taste metal.

"And this rain I keep hearing about," Horace plunged on. "It's certainly not raining now. Is going to rain soon? Am I going to get wet? I mean, isn't this town too nice to be built by people who get rained on every day?"

As the Soupster moaned silently, a beam of sunlight illuminated a break in the throng of tourists ahead. "Yup," said the Soupster, shaking Horace's hand. "Nope," he added. And then the Soupster escaped.

Learn about discovering hidden caches while exploring, and take an easy 1 to 2-mile hike. Participants/parents & guardians should bring a smart phone w/a downloaded geocache app. Also, kids should bring a trinket or two in exchange for a "treasure" they may discover. Hike length will depend on the interest level of the group. Bring your water bottle. For info. see sitkatrailworks.org or call 747-7244. Ad#7535b049.

teers. A difficult hike through a series of switchbacks, w/spectacular views from the top. Elevation gain is 2550 ft to Picnic Rock. Expect numerous rocky sections, log steps, and tree roots. The trail will be slippery and muddy if wet. STW recommends bringing water, lunch, hiking poles, and a camera. Hike leaders will carry first aid supplies & VHF radios. This is the maiden voyage of the new "Nat Mandel Sitka Trivia Crossword." The late Nat Mandel was a well-known Sitkan for several decades. He worked as a lab tech at Mt. Edgecumbe Hospital & was an active participant in the Baranof Theater Guild. Nat spoke often about the need for local involvement. He was a longtime vocal supporter of Amnesty International. And, an ardent fan of Trivial Pursuit (!!) We like to think Nat would have approved of the Sitka Soup crossword.

GARDENING IS FUN FOR KIDS!

Kids enjoy gardening for many reasons. Gardening engages all of your senses touch, sight, scent, sound & taste! There are many vegetables & flowers which grow well in Sitka. They include: radishes, carrots, sweet peas, nasturtiums, kale, chives, forget-me-nots, cabbage, garlic, rhubarb & more! Flowers are fun to grow & beautiful, yet veggies are also fun to grow & fill your plate!
