Our Town 2/28/19

Originally published 03/27/08

The Soupster talks about nicknames and writing

The Soupster sat on the big rock behind the library, staring at a departing fishing boat outlined by the setting sun, reminded again that Our Town could look glorious. "We should all be painters," he muttered to an invisible audience. Then, he heard a voice.

"Soupster," said Rocky "Stallion" Bilbao - whose name sounded like "Rocky Balboa" and, since Bilbao was of a slight stature, he was naturally called "Stallion" after the "Italian Stallion," according to the perverse rules of nicknames -- "you're muttering."

"My father used to mutter," said the Soupster. "So did me Mutter."

"Hah!" said Rocky. "Say, Soupster, why do you call me 'Stallion?'"

"You know the rules of nicknames," said the Soupster, who thought he was stating the obvious.

"Your name sounds like Rocky Balboa's and you don't look at all like a boxer, so you get a boxer's nickname. Like naming a really big guy 'Tiny.'"

"But my name is Bilbao, which is a city in Spain that has a famous art museum," Stallion said. "So why don't you call me 'Art?'"

"Guggenheim?" asked the Soupster.

"Garfunkle?" countered Stallion.

"No, Guggenheim!" the Soupster pressed.

"Why would you want to call me Garfunkle Guggenheim?" asked Stallion.

"Guggenheim is the name of the museum!" said an exasperated Soupster. "Art Garfunkle was the taller half of that folk singing duo."

The two men shuffled pebbles with their feet for a moment. "Soupster," Stallion said finally. "You know how you're always making me read your little stories? How come you never ask me to write one?"

"That's not a bad idea," said the Soupster. "Do you think you would want to?"

"I would," said Stallion. "Especially if you paid me for it."

"Okay, how's this," the Soupster proposed. "If you or anybody wants to write an Our Town column, the story would have to be between 450 and 500 words long, and it must connect with life in Our Town and the people of Our Town. We'll pay $50 if we run it in the Soup."

"You should make sure you're in the story," said Stallion. "You have to be a character. You should make that one of the rules... Say, Soupster, how do I know you're serious?"

"If I was serious, I'd put it in the Soup," said the Soupster.

Would you like to create an Our Town? The Sitka Soup would welcome an infusion of "new blood." You may tell your story in words (450-500 of them), or as a graphic "cartoon" strip. We would even consider a short, original photo essay with B&W photos. Your Our Town must be closely connected with the life of Sitkans, and the Soupster must make an appearance, even if it's a brief one. If we run your Our Town, we'll pay you $50. To submit: Email your creation to shop@sitkasoup.com and put "Our Town" in the Subject line. Or call: 747-7595 with Dr. Supriya Mathur on Friday, Mar. 22 from 6-8:30 p.m. @ Sitka Kitch community kitchen at the Sitka Lutheran Church. Learn how to make chicken curry during the Sitka Kitch class, Indian Cooking with Dr. Supriya Mathur. This class is part of our Cooking Around the World series and is a fundraiser for the Sitka Kitch. Dr. Mathur works at SEARHC in Sitka as an ENT specialist. Dr. Mathur grew up in India and did not leave home until age 25. She says: "Coming to the United States caused my food world to expand and grow at an explosive pace; however after living here for 20 plus years and having kids, my go-to food is Indian. I am now more aware of all the health benefits of the different Indian spices that are used and my background as a physician and a mother makes me strive to find healthy, flavorful meals that are not very labor intensive. I grew up on lentils and rice but chicken curry or goat curry was always a treat in my house." The class menu will include chicken curry — a staple of many Indian households and a versatile dish that can be tweaked to make many other kinds of — recipes, a dip, and a side dish. Registration deadline for the Indian cooking class is 11:30 p.m. on Tuesday, March 19. Go to <http://sitkakitch.events.mart.com> (click on class title). For those wanting to pre-pay with cash or check, please call Claire Sanchez or Clarice Johnson at Sitka Conservation Society (747-7509) to arrange a payment. For more information about the class, contact Jasmine Shaw at 747-9440. We do offer one potential scholarship spot per class for people with limited incomes, so long as we have enough students registered to make the class happen. Contact Claire at SCS for more details about the scholarship. 9945c7011e

Interested fishermen can register online at www.asea.org or call (907) 747-3287. Ergonomic principles can help fishermen to avoid common musculoskeletal injuries that can result in lost fishing time, expensive physical therapy or surgery, and a shortened fishing career. Instructor Jerry Dzugan will cover the musculoskeletal system; injury risk factors; injury prevention; repetitive motion; cold temperature; safer techniques for lifting, pushing, and pulling; workstation and tool design; and stretches and exercises to help prevent injuries. This class is free to commercial fishermen, thanks to support from the DCCED, NIOSH, and AMSEA members. 2835c6aa54

Patterns!

A PATTERN is a regularity in nature, man-made design or abstract ideas. The elements of a pattern repeat in a predictable way. A geometric pattern is a kind of pattern made of geometric shapes and typically repeated like a wrapping paper design.

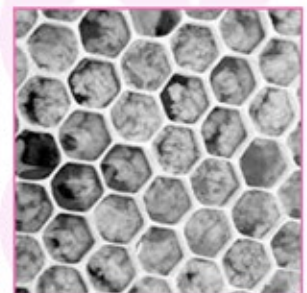

The stripe & color patterns on tigers, like the Sumatran Tiger below, are identical on each side of its body.

Identify the patterns below.
Are they man-made, or made by nature?

Architectural pattern

Nautilus shell (nature), sunflower (nature), aloe (nature), nautical rope rug (man-made) & honeycomb (nature)
