Our Town 5/9/19

The Soupster chats with one busy mom

Originally published May 1, 2003

Connie's three children scattered to the ice cream section of the store. Lugging an overflowing supermarket basket in the crook of her arm, she stopped at a display of high-priced garlic-stuffed Aegean olives where there happened to stand a Soupster.

"Happy Mother's Day," he said, glancing toward the big freezers. "Your kids look happy."

"They sure seem to be," Connie nodded. "Strange, since I had them at work all morning painting the garden fence and all the porch railings."

"Quite the day for it," said the Soupster, this time doing the nodding.

And indeed, the Soupster's pupils were just able to dilate again after a day of squinting at the nearly prehistoric sunshine of the morning. In Our Town, the infrequent Sun seems on rare days to have the quality of the Sun of an earlier Earth, before a protective atmospheric ozone layer had even formed. A sharp, almost painful amount of light, without the softening rain and clouds that usually roll their blanket over all.

"There's such pressure to do things when the sun does come out," he told Connie. "I mean, you never know how long before you're going to have the chance again."

"Today was incredibly busy," Connie said. "Woke up early. Saw the big yellow orb. Woke the kids. Fed them. Put them to work. Painting, painting, painting."

"What was the rush?" asked the Soupster.

"Piano recital," said Connie. "So – painted, painted, painted all morning. Then washed, washed, washed all three kids free of paint. Fed them again. Dressed them for the recital. Drove them to the recital. Soothed their stage fright. Listened attentively. Gave them a little critical, but 90 percent supportive feedback after they played."

"Now you're getting stuff to make dinner?"

"The ingredients," Connie said. "The kids tell me they're going to cook me an 'extra special' Mother's Day meal."

"Which will end up twice as much work for you?" said the Soupster.

"You're learning," Connie laughed and punched the Soupster lightly on the bicep. He felt an overwhelming fondness for this hard-working Mom.

"Your kids don't know your real Mother's Day present was the piano recital?" said the Soupster as he bid his friend goodbye.

"Are you kidding, Soupster?" Connie said, pushing him away. "My Mother's Day present was getting the fence painted!"

Would you like to create an Our Town? The Sitka Soup would welcome an infusion of "new blood." You may tell your story in words (450-500 of them), or as a graphic "cartoon" strip. We would even consider a short original photo essay with B&W photos. Your Our Town must be closely connected with the life of Sitkans, and the Soupster must make an appearance, even if it's a brief one. If we run your Our Town, we'll pay you $50. To submit: Email your creation to shop@sitkasoup.com and put "Our Town" in the Subject line. Or call: 747-7595.

MUSTACHES!

Film stars Groucho Marx & Charlie Chaplin, artist Salvador Dali and former US President Teddy Roosevelt all had well-known mustaches. Groucho used black paint to make a fake mustache, but later on he grew a real one.

Jackie Ellison is a champion mustache grower. He has won many mustache contests over the years!

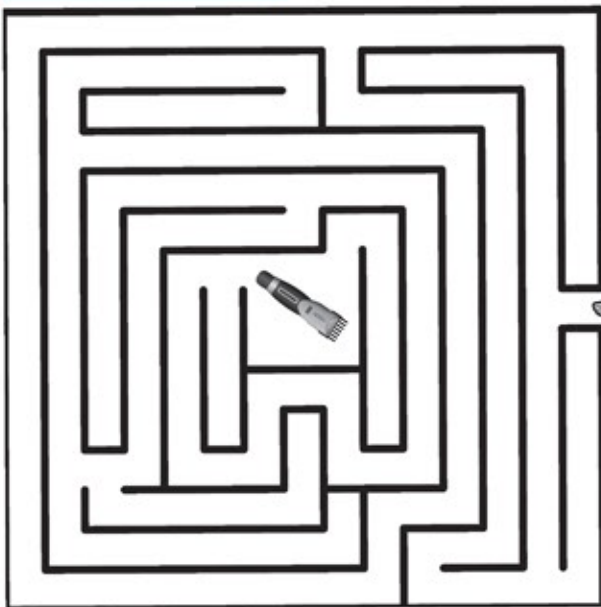

I mustache you a question, but I'll shave it for later.

Draw your favorite mustache on the face above!

This fellow is ready to shave, but has lost his clippers. Help him find them through the maze!

Policemen in large Indian cities are sometimes paid a bonus if they grow a mustache. Mustaches are considered a symbol of power.
