The Soupster riffs with a jazzy friend

The Soupster was perusing his favorite thrift shop's assortment of kitchenware when he heard his name from across the shop.

"Soupster! I've been thinking of you all week!" He recognized the joyful voice of his pal and fellow jazz fan, Liz, who approached him excitedly through the crowd.

"Oh yeah? What kind of trouble are you cookin' up, dear?"

"I Ain't Misbehavin', Soupster." Liz replied. "Have you seen the recently discovered short video clip of Louis Armstrong as a young teenager?" Liz knew the Soupster liked his jazz early and hot. Nothing later than 1929 was his jazz preference.

"I did catch that! A New Orleans newspaper boy flashes his grin, and experts have agreed it is likely Armstrong. 104 year-old video - very cool, indeed."

"Well I've been on a solid Armstrong kick since seeing that clip, buddy, and ever since I feel I've got the world on a string!"

Liz's laugh was as infectious as her joyous and kind, ear-to-ear smile – freely shared with all she encountered. Not unlike Satchmo himself, the Soupster thought. Determined to replace his shabby compost bucket, he continued to eye the goods.

"Frankly, Soupster, I cannot stop referencing Armstrong song titles, and it's driving my kids nuts. But I'm entertained, and honestly, I can't help lovin' dat man!" Their combined robust laughter filled the shop, turning only a few tourists' heads.

"Good for you, Liz," the Soupster chuckled. "Since his career spanned 50 years, that should keep you going strong for quite a while, though if you're not careful, someday you'll be sorry. Before you know it, your hubby will be bombarding you with Zappa lyrics you're oblivious to."

Grateful that her fellow jazz lover grokked her silly joy, Liz giggled, "We've a fine romance, Soupster and It takes two to tango!"

"Aha! There it is!" The Soupster triumphantly exclaimed while pulling from the top shelf a 3-gallon bucket. "Have any shows on the horizon, Liz?" he asked. Liz volunteered at the community radio station.

"Sure do - I'm on tomorrow afternoon. Though I did miss my last slot," Liz explained, "I caught a bug."

"Gut Bucket Blues?" joked the Soupster.

Liz laughed, "Not quite. Speaking of buckets," she pointed to the Soupster's score, "What gives?"

"Well, you're gonna love this - I need it because my old bucket's got a hole in it. No lie."

Liz couldn't help herself, "What can you say - You're just a lucky so and so."

The Soupster paid for his bucket and began to mosey out of the crowded shop. He spotted the clouds above parting in the north, allowing sunbeams to permeate through the thinning overhead.

He turned around and called out, "I'm beginning to see the light, Liz! On the sunny side of the street!"

Liz's enormous smile returned as she laughingly shot back, "What a wonderful world!"

JAZZ

JAZZ is a truly American music genre. It originated in the African-American communities of New Orleans at the turn of the 20th Century. Jazz represents freedom. Jazz is important, because it teaches Improvisation, Innovation and how to listen.

© Herman Leonard, 1949

CHARLIE 'BIRD' PARKER & DIZZY GILLESPIE

Improvisation virtuosos
Bird (Alto Sax) & Dizzy (Trumpet).

One important part of jazz is improvisation, which means the person playing is making music up as they go along! This usually happens during solos, but not all the time!
