Our Town 8/15/19

Originally published September 9, 2004

Even a reliable car will die if you don't put gas in it.

As the Soupster drove toward downtown, the dreaded "check engine" light of his car flicked on. A moment later, all the other little icons on his dashboard lit up -- the oil light, the battery light, the low fuel light. These symbols are called "Idiot Lights" because if you neglect a problem until they go on, you've waited too long. To keep track of the gas, you get not just a light but a whole gauge. So, if you let your car run out of gas, you're a super idiot.

The Soupster's sedan rolled to a stop.

Now, if you run out of gas on this country's great prairies, you could be forgiven. If you happen to miss the "Next Gas 42 Miles" sign on Route 80, you could be forgiven. But it's pretty hard to forgive running out of gas in Our Town -- on land at least.

So, the Soupster did not forgive himself as he pulled over to the side of the road on a Thursday afternoon, right at quitting time.

He had no sooner shut off the car than someone came by. A jogger. With a baby in a skookum three-wheeled, all-terrain stroller.

For a second, the Soupster thought the jogger would be mad at him for parking too close to the pedestrian path, but she immediately offered the use of her cell phone. So, the Soupster called his friend Don and asked him to bring some gas.

The Soupster thanked the jogger, who jogged happily off. Replaced then by a cloud of dust, as a huge pick-up pulled in, practically dislodging chunks of asphalt with its outsized tires. The Soupster's friend Moe's son Larry.

"Need help?" he asked, and the Soupster explained that gas was on the way.

As Larry pulled out, Curly and Jo, who the Soupster had been meaning to call, pulled over. And, seeing the others, Adam and his little son Abel pulled over and joined the group.

"Which of you needs help?" Adam asked, and Jo laughed when they were told, "Neither! But thanks!"

Curly and Jo went back to their car, but the Soupster stood by the roadside, signaling that he was okay to the half dozen acquaintances who passed by.

Then, on the other side of the road, the Soupster's Absolute Worst Enemy stopped and asked if he needed help. When told the Soupster was out of gas, AWE went round to the back of his car and emerged with gas-can-and-triumphant-smile.

The Soupster felt beads of sweat drip down his neck. Do you accept help from your Absolute Worst Enemy? What is the rule?

Mercifully, the arrival of Don's Jeep kept the Soupster from having to answer that. He called to AWE, "Thanks, but I'm okay now!" with real relief.

Don handed the Soupster a full gas can. "Boy, wanna see everybody you know?" the Soupster said. "Just run out of gas in Our Town, on the side of the road, at quitting time!"

Ed. Note - For Kids and Other People – What Should I do with the stones? (not a guide to watching old Donna Reed episodes on T.V.)

- You should spit out the stone (not swallow it - that is another whole story).
- But you don't have to throw it away in the garbage.
- You can throw it away outdoors, on soil or in a garden, for instance.
- It will eventually biodegrade (go back to the earth) although it will take a long time, depending on the size of the stone.
- You could put it in a compost pile, where it can provide texture and aeration until it does biodegrade.
- For people who live in the right kind of climate, you can even take the actual seed or kernel inside the stone, plant it in soil and sprout it to make a seedling which can grow into a fruit tree - there are about 5 gazillion articles on the internet about how to do this, BUT, as with all things on the internet, you have to pick and choose the best information (kind of like sifting compost, huh?)
- Look up the USDA Map of Plant Hardiness Zones in Alaska. Cherries may grow best in hardiness zones of 4 through 9; peaches, in zones 5 through 9.

Stone Fruit also known as Drupes

Stone fruits are fleshy fruits with a hard "stone" inside. The "stone" is often mistaken for the "seed" but that's not quite right - the seed is inside the stone! The stone can also be called a "pit." Peaches, nectarines, plums, lychees, mangoes, apricots & cherries are all examples of stone fruits.

Unscramble the Stone Fruit below!

It was pit-iful.

Did you hear the joke about the cherry?

Why did the nectarine wear a wig? Because it wanted to be a peach!

All Stone Fruits are Drupes, but not all Drupes are Fruit!

Here are some other drupes, where what we eat is actually the seed inside the pit, rather than the fruit!

- Coconuts    Almonds    Walnuts

Scramble Answers

- nectarine    coconut
- cherry        apricot
- peach        loquat
- plumb        lychee
- mango
