Our Town 11/7/19

Originally published November 4, 2004

"Hand me that laser level, will you," the Soupster said to Charley, a carpenter friend who was helping him. "I want to do a professional job hanging these pictures."

The phone rang. Looking at the display, the Soupster recognized the number of his old friend Zack, who worked with the National Oceanic and Atmosphere Administration as a meteorologist.

"Soupster!" Zack said. "My ship is in town for repairs for a few days. We've been out studying the weather."

"I didn't know NOAA was here studying the weather," said the Soupster, who also didn't notice Charley listening closely to his side of the conversation. "So, what's NOAA's forecast?" he prodded Zack.

The Soupster listened to the answer in silence and then said gravely. "That does seem like a lot of rain, even for here."

Zack then described in detail the $300,000 NOAA was spending in Our Town, with another $3.9 million scheduled for the vessel's shakedown in the spring.

"I hear ya," said the Soupster. "NOAA is building quite a ship."

If the Soupster had turned around, even for a second, he would have seen the stricken look on Charley's face. But the next day, he noticed a change in his friend's behavior. For one thing, the usually fastidious carpenter began missing nailheads and denting beams. After Charley started spending more time apologizing than working, the Soupster suggested that he go home.

And the following day, things didn't get much better. For most of the morning Charley found ways to annoy the Soupster and slow the work. Charley seemed just on the verge of saying

The Soupster's carpenter-friend is distracted by a "patriarch"

something, but then so was the Soupster – on the verge of losing patience.

The phone rang in the next room and the Soupster picked it up. "Soupster," said a cheery Zack. "My entire extended family has come to visit me on the ship while I'm in port!"

"That's a quite a menagerie you're bringing on board," marveled the Soupster out loud.

"My two daughters, my parents, the two cousins and at least two other groups," said Zack.

"Two by two by two by two," said the Soupster. "Good luck with all those unpredictable creatures."

Zack laughed. "Thanks!"

When the Soupster went back to the worksite, Charley was gone. And for the next two days, no Charley. As annoying as the guy had become, he made time go faster. The Soupster went to his friend's house to find him.

He saw the light on in the biggest shed. He heard sawing and pounding inside. He walked in and saw Charley working on what looked like a huge floating tank.

"Charley, what are you doing?" the Soupster asked.

Charley pointed to the stout craft he was building. "Noah tells you it's going to rain heavier, he's building a boat and stocking it with animals! There's something you're not telling me, Soupster, and I'm getting ready for it!"

"That's N-O-A-A," said the Soupster. "The National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration."

"Oh," said Charlie, and a long minute passed. "Well, see you tomorrow at work, then."

unmanned, long-term layup status in Ketchikan effective Jan. 10, 2020. The (vessel) will end revenue service when it arrives in Ketchikan on approx. 12/2/19. "The (vessel) was scheduled for overhaul this winter, and a preliminary investigation revealed extensive steel replacement was needed. The repair work for the 56-year-old vessel was estimated to be at least $16 million; this is in excess of the available budget and cannot be completed at this time. There will be no impact on the published AMHS schedule. No long-term decisions have been made at this time regarding the future of the vessel." 1045db7439458d3b

Saffron is one of the world's most valuable spices, costing as much as $1800 per pound. It comes from the "saffron crocus flower" which is purple and blooms in October. The spice, used in cooking, comes specifically from the rare red stigma & styles of the plant, has a fragrance like hay and contains a pigment that gives a golden-yellow hue to dishes (such as Spanish paella) & textiles.

Macadamias are the most expensive nuts, costing as much as $25 per pound!
