Our Town 3/12/20

Originally published March 6, 2003

The grocery store was packed. The Soupster had to walk sideways down the Canned Tomatoes aisle to pass the shopping carts parked on the left and then on the right. Unusual for Our Town, a long line of shoppers waited impatiently at the checkout stand.

When the Soupster finally got to the front of the line, he saw the reason for the delay. The young woman at the cash register was as overcareful with each transaction as a cat pacing the rim of a steamy bathtub.

She meticulously rotated each food item in her hand to find the UPC code, then drew the item across the scanner with a kind of dreamy slowness. She smiled individually at each person in line, looking for validation, then, with effort, picked up the next food item. The Soupster shifted his weight from one foot to the other. So did everyone in the steadily growing line behind him.

People had started to clear their throats, when a man in his 30's with a badge that said "Asst. Mgr." swept up behind the counter next to the cashier.

"Kathy! You are to call for help when the line gets this long," he said in a theatrical whisper, meant for everyone to hear. "You should never let the line get this long, Kathy!"

"Ma'am," the Asst. Mgr. said over-solicitously to the woman behind the Soupster. "All of you, come with me," he pointed to the entire line and they moved with him to another checkout stand.

The young cashier's face reddened. Only halfway through his transaction, the Soupster stood alone now before her. She went back to her slow-motion scanning of the Soupster's few items. Meanwhile, the first members of the Asst. Mgr.'s line were already picking up their grocery bags and walking out the door.

"Sorry," Kathy said, looking downcast.

"No problem," said the Soupster. "First day on the job?"

She nodded. "Probably going to be my only day," she said and, indeed, the Asst. Mgr. was shooting daggers her way, hidden behind the bland smile he showed his customers.

"Keep at it," said the Soupster.

"I said DON'T RUSH ME!" came a loud, deep voice from the other register. The Soupster and the young cashier turned.

A very large man loomed over the Asst. Mgr., who was pinned against the back wall of his checkout station. The man slammed down his wallet and leaned forward in the direction of the Asst. Mgr. who looked extremely flustered and ready to bolt.

"Manny," called the young cashier, as she left her workstation and slipped in next to her trembling co-worker. "Manny, Manny, Manny, cool your jets," she laughed and poked the big man in the chest. Manny laughed. The Asst. Mgr. visibly unstiffened.

The cashier returned to the Soupster. She looked a lot happier than a minute before. "Will there be anything else, Sir?" she asked sweetly.

"I think you got your job back, Kathy," the Soupster answered.

that our birds are in serious trouble?

389 North American bird species – nearly two-thirds of those studied – are vulnerable to extinction due to climate change. In the past 50 years, we lost one in four birds across North America and Canada. That's close to 3 billion breeding adult birds across all biomes! We lost 33% of boreal forest birds, 23% of Arctic tundra birds and 37% of shorebirds.

CLIMATE & WEATHER

Though they are closely related, weather and climate aren't the same thing.

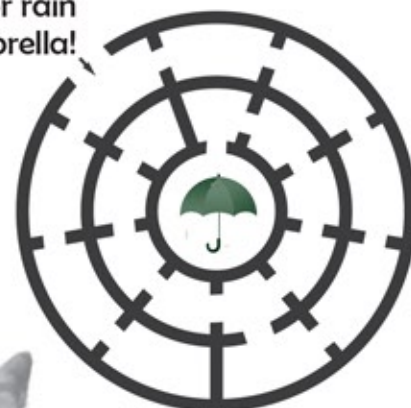

What's the difference?

Weather can change from minute-to-minute, hour-to-hour, day-to-day and season-to-season. Climate is the average of weather over time & space. Changes in climate tend to be gradual. BUT NOT ANYMORE!

Weather tells you what to wear each day. Climate tells you what types of clothes to keep in your closet.

Forecasts call for rain - find your way to the umbrella!

Local youth groups addressing climate concerns:

Sitka High's Climate Action Group

Mt. Edgecumbe Environmental Group

Alaska's Youth for Environmental Action

I check the window for weather, and the calendar for climate.

The Marine Weather Forecast is a valuable tool in Southeast AK, because it tells us about weather conditions on the water. Fishermen and boaters rely on the Marine Weather Forecast to work & travel safely.
