Our Town 5/21/2020

The Soupster and his friend appreciate junk

As a rule, the Soupster didn't make a point of answering the phone before 11am, unless he happened to be awake and feel so inclined. When his land line rang shortly after 9 he caught it on the third ring. His pal Brandy's husky voice greeted him from the other end.

"Good morning - you're up?" Brandy chuckled. Her voice resonated with jittery excitement. The Soupster tried to respond, only to be cut off.

"As one Our Towner who lives sans social media to another, I had let you know that piles of 'FREE Take Me' stuff are popping up all over town."

The Soupster cleared his throat and replied, "Finally, we've returned to the tried and true, rudimentary small-town way of Help-Yourself-Odds-&-Ends piles. I'm in, Brandy, and ready in 20."

Her van was a hybrid of sorts, though not an electric kind. It had, over the decades, been reconstructed and refurbished piece by piece from salvaged parts of other vehicles, from doors to bumpers and beyond. Brandy fiercely maintained it was an ever-changing functional work of art.

"Better hop in back," Brandy piped out the window. "Gotta mind our distancing."

Humming Johnny Cash's One Piece At a Time, the Soupster hopped into the van, careful not to slam the door too hard. His homemade mask boasted a blue and yellow pattern of Snoopy's Fonz-inspired alter ego.

"I knew you were good for it!" Brandy laughed through her violet mask. "And thanks for remembering the door. She's fragile."

"So what stuff have you seen?" the Soupster inquired, his curiosity bubbling.

"Ribbed PVC hose, an old wooden birdhouse, bedding," she began. "Awkward, funky-looking metal cabinets. Oh, and sawdust! All sorts of stuff, though I haven't even begun - I wanted to partner up first," she explained.

The Soupster said, "Well, 'one's man's junk is another man's treasure' and I'm sure folks think thrice about what they pitch in the garbage, and what they put out for the taking."

"I'd expect so - sometimes the junk you find is just the junk you're looking for," Brandy agreed.

"Maybe some of this oddball junk could be used for a project. Kids could make art or science projects with only the materials found roadside," the Soupster mused.

"Like the cooking shows where they work magic with only the ingredients provided - yes, that's a fine idea, Soupster, but why only kids? Adults need creative projects too."

They pulled over near a church, where a family's mound of garage sale storage boxes had been neatly set up. The pile yielded a Snoopy snow globe for Brandy and a brown and green, seemingly hole-less tarp for the Soupster.

"It's a good sign," she giggled, shaking the globe and directing her eyes at the glitter-swirled Snoopy. "Now how about that project idea?"

"I'm sold. Let's snag that birdhouse you mentioned, and add a disco waterslide!" the Soupster chuckled. "What better way to keep Our Town's perfectly usable junk out of a landfill?"

"Now, that is creative thinking," Brandy concurred.

Join the 2020 Local Foods Challenge - Make the SE Alaska food system more resilient! Are you ready for a challenge? Per Charles Bingham's May 19 post on Sitka Local Foods: "Food is not just about what we eat. It's also about where it comes from and the connections it creates between people and places along the way. Join us on a journey to explore and transform Southeast Alaska's food system by being part of the 2020 Local Foods Challenge. This event is hosted by the Sustainable Southeast Partnership, in collaboration w/ the Southeast Alaska Watershed Coalition... To help you on this local food journey, we will connect you to resources related to all 10 categories, and we will share stories to inspire and celebrate our successes. To sign up for the challenge, go to: <https://www.saltandsoilmarketplace.com/localfoodchallenge-welcome>. Here's how it works: When you sign up, you'll take a survey to assess your involvement in 10 distinct categories of the local food system. Your challenge from May to September is to deepen your connection to the local food system by increasing your level of engagement for each category." ### Reopen Alaska Responsibly Phase 3/4 Info

Governor Dunleavy Announces Phases 3 and 4 of Re-opening Alaska to take effect Friday, May 22. During his news conference last night, the Governor announced that on Friday:

- All businesses can open
- All houses of worship can open
- Libraries and museums can open
- All recreational activities can open
- All sports activities can open

The following exceptions remain:

- 14-day quarantine for interstate and international travel to Alaska remains in place. This will be reevaluated by June 2, 2020 but will be reviewed weekly.
- All senior centers, prisons, and institutions will continue to have restricted access.
- Any proposed large public gatherings such as festivals and concerts need to consult first with public health before scheduling.
- The State will continue to work with large industries to protect their workforce and the communities in which they operate.
- Communities may still elect to keep in place travel restrictions.
- Some Alaskan communities may wish to extend restrictions on non-essential travel into their communities for health reasons. Check with your local community.
- Health Mandates 15 (Elective Medical/Dental), 17 (Commercial Fishing), and 18 (Intrastate Travel) remain in effect.

While out of state travel restrictions have not been lifted, the Governor noted that his administration is working with the Alaska Air Carrier's Association to discuss how to safely restore travel to/from Alaska.

General guidelines are available on the state's website, with detailed guidance expected to be posted on May 21.

Rivers, Lakes & Dams!

Dams are among the most intricately designed structures, awesome in their sheer dimension & immense capacity!

A dam is a barrier constructed to stop or restrict the flow of water. Dams raise water levels, forming a reservoir used to generate electricity or as a water supply. Reservoirs created by dams not only suppress floods but also provide water for activities such as irrigation, human consumption, industrial use, aquaculture & navigability.
