Our Town 7/2/2020

Originally published June 26, 2003

The Soupster channels – well, not Independence Day, but maybe Bastille Day?

Before the strolling Soupster even reached the bend in the road, he heard three things: the treble- triples and quads of bald eagles, the more purposeful caws of ravens and the baritone of his neighbor, Jean-Pierre, spouting loud, angry French.

After retiring from a bicycle manufacturer in Paris, Jean-Pierre had built a sailboat and headed out to sea. Six years later, with a wife he'd met in Phnom Penh and a son born in Christchurch, New Zealand, Jean-Pierre came ashore in Our Town and declared it "Ze Heaven On Zis Earth!" The son was married himself now and living Outside. The wife had moved back to Cambodia to be with her family. But to Jean-Pierre, Our Town was still "Heaven on Zis Earth."

Well, maybe not today.

Today, Jean-Pierre was in a furious competition with some ravens to return the contents of his trash can to their rightful place before the birds could pull the items out again.

In the hemlocks surrounding Jean-Pierre's trash-strewn driveway, bald eagles watched the action from a dignified distance. Not so the ravens, one of which swooped low enough to knock Jean-Pierre's cap off. Then the bird glided smoothly to the rim of the can, cackled happily and grabbed a piece of melon peel.

"Yo, Jean-Pierre," the Soupster called. "You can't win a battle against those odds. Let me help you."

The Soupster tipped the scales some in Jean-Pierre's favor. The ravens may have given the Soupster slack because he truly loved ravens. Or because he was not French. Whatever, they flew back up into the hemlocks and started harassing the eagles.

"What got this stuff all over, Jean-Pierre?" the Soupster asked.

"I zink it was ze bear, mon Zoupster," said Jean-Pierre. "It may have been ze land otter, but I don't zink zo. I zink it was ze bear."

"Did you keep your trash in your garage until pickup day?" asked the Soupster.

"Oui! Yes!" said Jean-Pierre. "Always!"

"Did you put any fish or meat in the can that might have smelled strong and attracted the bear?"

"Sacre bleu!" Jean-Pierre said. "My freezer needed repair. I thought for just a little while it would be all right. You are right, Zoupster. It was ze fish!"

"Not such a 'heaven on earth' if you have to watch your garbage so closely, eh, Jean-Pierre?" the Soupster teased.

"Au contraire, Zoupster!" Jean-Pierre said. "Zis is nature. In nature, zere is always zometing to leverage ze mistake of any creature. Nature, she is very efficient, no?"

"Yes," the Soupster said.

"And Zoupster," Jean-Pierre concluded, as the two men hoisted upright the now-filled can. "We are zo lucky to live right with nature. With nature right on our doorstep. In our driveway. C'est magnifique, no?"

Arts Council News -

Virtual Open Mic is still operating on Facebook and You Tube. There are approx. 150 videos on both social platforms – nice way to share the talents of musicians who are not able to utilize a live stage
for their performances.
WEARABLE ART - We are excited to announce that we will be holding Wearable Art 2020 on September 19. To date we have 14 designers

who are interested in participating. We have joined forces with Ellen Frankenstein & ArtChange, Inc. Andrew & Mary Hames have graciously agreed to be our emcees. We still have volunteer positions available (Silent Auction, Backstage, VIP seating, Assisting w/hair & make-up). What happens if we cannot hold the show in September? If COVID prevents us from holding the show, the committee has decided to move it back to its original month of March 2021. Monthly Grind - Plans are underway for the next season of Monthly Grinds.
The first Grind is planned for Sept. 25, with theme of Artist's/Songwriter's Grind.
If you are interested in producing a Grind show or just helping, contact Jeff

DID YOU KNOW

that people are talking more and more about fungi?

From Alaskan foragers, to the U.S. Forest Service, to radical eco-biologists like Merlin Sheldrake, people are talking about fungi. 'From slime molds to magic mushrooms, fungi are among the most fascinating and mysterious organisms in biology. If we ever do find life on other planets it will probably look more like a mushroom or an intertidal invertebrate than like a human with a bony nose and a funny-shaped head with antennae.'
