Our Town 10/22/2020

"Hi, Soupster," called a voice from behind the mask.

The Soupster squinted in concentration, struggling to recognize the pleasantly crinkled eyes above the mask. He almost had it... wait, wait...

"Anastasia Anarchy! It's you!" he finally said triumphantly. "So good to run into you, Stace," he continued, striving to use his best, Ethel-Merman-projecting abdominal voice, and to enunciate carefully from behind his mask. The last time he'd spoken with Anastasia, she'd shown some signs of a hearing deficit.

"Yes, wonderful serendipity, chancing upon each other in front of this grocery store pop-up cello concert. Though maybe not total chance, eh, Soupster. There are patterns everywhere."

"Is that your truck over there, Stace? Let's go chat a bit over the hood while we listen to the music." They got to the truck and the Soupster glanced down through the open window at the passenger seat.

"What's that, Stace," he said. "It looks like a DVD of Wagon Train???"

"Yeah, that it is, Soupster. I used to watch that on T.V. all the time when I was a kid. I was," she said with twinkling eyes, "especially enamored of the scout, Flint McCullough."

"Oh, I remember him," said the Soupster. "Wasn't he played by a guy named Robert something?"

"Yup. Robert Horton. That's him. One time, when I was about eight, I even had a dream about him," said Anastasia. "He was out doing his advance scouting thing and he was fording a river. He was walking through the water towards me, and I walked in to meet him...But maybe I'd better leave it there."

A friend raises the Soupster's consciousness about "the worst thing"

"I get it, Stace. Sometimes you don't know what something means until years later."

"I was fascinated by cowboy movies, Soupster. Sometimes I wanted to be a cowboy and have those special skills – you know, like swinging a lariat and yodeling. Not much to do with guns except maybe twirling them round your finger. Later on, in high school, I learned some basic bow-and-arrow skills, like not hyper-extending my bow arm and receiving a terrible burn."

"All that cowboys and Indians stuff, Soupster – it was really a thoughtless world I grew up in."

The Soupster looked steadily at Anastasia and said nothing.

"One time, years ago, when I was working as a young lab tech at the hospital, one day I went in to draw some blood in one of those four-person rooms. I'm pretty sure it was a Saturday afternoon. This must have been, like, back in '82.

"There were these three older guys sitting around watching T.V. I was getting my tourniquet and stuff ready and I saw they were watching a western. They seemed really quite absorbed in it. A couple of them were older Tlingit guys. They were just, patiently, sitting there and watching the show, and I asked them, 'Does it ever bother you? Watching westerns like that?'

"And one of the old guys said, 'Well, some of them are pretty bad, but at least we're up there on the screen. We're not invisible. That's the worst thing, you know. Being invisible.'"

If you are looking for a change in Southeast Alaska, NOW is the time!

ALASKA MARINE HIGHWAY

Once elected, I will ensure this vital transportation mode stays in step with growth in our communities.

ECONOMIC DIVERSITY

I will work hard to create jobs & economic diversity in our Southeast. Hoonah's huge tourism development during my tenure as mayor is a testament to this aspiration.

SMALLER GOVERNMENT

I believe less taxes & less regulation creates an environment for business stability & development. Legislating a responsible budget and living within our means is critical for Alaska.

DID YOU KNOW

That U.S. citizens with a history of of felony conviction may lose their right to vote for many years (sometimes forever) ?

Laws governing restoration of post-felony voting privileges vary widely from state-to-state; Alaska is one of 21 states which restores the right to vote after completion of sentence (including probation or parole). One Sitka citizen explains: 'I am really looking forward to voting in this election; it has been such a long time since I have been able to.'

ARTIST PROFILE

The winning design for the new Seal of the City and Borough of Sitka was announced Tuesday night, October 13th at the Assembly Meeting. The design was created by Aaron Traz Hill.

Hill - who goes by "Traz" - is a 30-year old tattoo artist who grew up in Sitka and now lives with his wife and two kids in Oklahoma.

Traz attended Blatchley Middle School and graduated from Sitka High School in 2008. He moved to Sitka in 2001 with his parents Sonja & Ron Conner, who came to Sitka through work with their church. Sonja works for AK Air and Ron for Sitka Electric.

In early October, Traz received an "unofficial" notification from CBS that his design had been selected; this was followed shortly by the $1,000 prize check, but it "really seemed real when I heard my name announced at the at the Assembly Meeting."

How did Hill first hear about the City Seal Contest? "I was here with my wife and kids visiting my folks earlier in this spring, and they brought it to my attention." Traz says he has traveled to Sitka a couple of times this year - the second time, sadly, for the funeral of his grandma Ursula Zertuche, who died in May. Zertuche (a naturalized U.S. citizen originally born in Germany) lived in Sitka for several years in the 80s and from 2013 until her death in 2020.

Traz admits, "It was pretty difficult traveling (with the Covid-19 restrictions) but we were just careful and it was ok."

Traz says growing up here influenced him as an artist and "filled me with a lot of the qualities of Sitka." His career as a professional tattoo artist started "about seven years ago. I had dabbled before that but was not initially drawn to (that field) maybe partly because of my religious upbringing." He has done art his "whole life, coloring and drawing from a young age." He attended Sitka Fine Arts Camp, where besides art classes, he played percussion in jazz band, and was active in Sitka baseball.

Later on, Traz took some college art classes and "learned a lot." He got his professional tattoo license in 2014, and is presently licensed in Oklahoma, Texas, Florida and Alaska.

When asked if he still draws on paper, Traz affirmed, "Every day!" His parents and grandmother were "always very supportive." He particularly remembers "watching Bob Ross in the late 80s on PBS on grandma's TV." He was inspired by Ross' show "The Joy of Painting" with its "real time" demos of oil painting techniques. Hill recalls Ross' intimate speaking style and obvious appreciation for Alaska's natural world.

When asked about how he came up with his city seal design, Traz said how vital it was to him to include Alaska Native design elements, because "There wouldn't be a Sitka without Natives because they lived here first." Thus, the prominent totem pole in the foreground of the design. The young artist also attended a "Native carving course at Fine Arts Camp (and learned that) the design elements and the process were very structured."

"I also wanted to include both the bridge and fishing; I couldn't decide between them." He and one of his brothers worked in seining and tendering. "It was about more than (making) money," said Hill. "There was a feeling of tranquility out on the water."

"And I needed to get the Coast Guard (into the design), somehow, since they rescued my brother Chatham, after a potentially fatal accident." Hence, the helicopter in the sky in Hill's creation.

When asked about a couple of slightly different designs he had produced for the seal, Traz said that his original design had brighter colors (a notably bright orange sky). "Sitka has some really pretty days and sunsets," he admitted. But when the City Seal committee asked the finalists to make revisions, the artist came up with his "revised design with more muted tones, for a timeless, more official feel."

The new CBS City Seal was selected (in a blind selection process, where artists were not identified), and involved input from both the public, the City Design Review Committee, local boards and commissions, and the Sitka Tribe of Alaska.

Entomology

(or Let's Talk about the people who talk about Bugs)

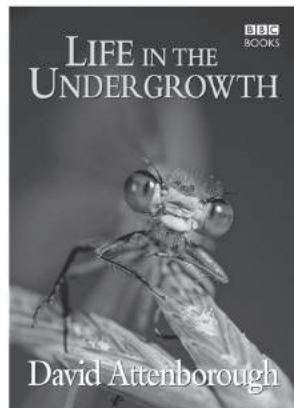

Entomology is the science of insects: "any form of scientific study in which there is a focus on insect-related inquiries."
(Not to be confused with Etymology, the study of the history of words.)

Insects account for more than 2/3 of all known organisms - 1.3 million species!
