What Does Alaska Day Mean to You?

The members of the Alaska Day Festival Committee wish all Alaskans a thoughtful Alaska Day - observing October 18th in a way that brings meaning for each of us.

Let's keep Sitkans, their friends and families safe. Let's plan ahead for next year and come up with ideas that Sitkans can embrace. Let's remember that how we think of history depends entirely on our perspective.

Our Town 10/8/2020

Originally Published October 5, 2000

"I hate October! It rains all the time with big wet drops!" wailed the pre-schooler, balanced on the Soupster's knee. "I WISH THERE WAS NO OCTOBER EVER AND EVER MORE!"

"Don't say that," hushed the Soupster. "If October went away, you would be very sad."

"No, I wouldn't!" protested the child.

"But if there were no October, do you know what else there would be no?"

"What?"

"Alaska Day! There would be no Alaska Day!" said the Soupster. "And no Halloween!"

"No Halloween!" he went on. "Sometimes no Yom Kippur for Jewish folks! No Thanksgiving for your cousin who lives in Toronto! And your e-mail pen pal in Christchurch, New Zealand would have to go to school on Labor Day, because the Kiwi's celebrate their Labor Day in October!"

"Are you a genius?" the clever kid asked, instantly seizing the Soupster's point and moving on to the next step. "Where did you learn all that?"

"From a Little Audrey cartoon when I was just about your age," said the Soupster, glazing over in a Boomer froth of remembrance.

"Little Audrey was tired of the rain -- in the cartoon I mean -- and she cried out for it never to rain again!" explained the Soupster.

"Did it rain again?" the child asked.

"Not for a long time," the Soupster answered.

The Soupster shares a valuable lesson learned from a cartoon

"At first, that was just fine with Little Audrey. She went out on a million picnics, hung her clothes right on the line to dry and was never told by her parents that she had to wear a hat.

"But as the rainlessness went on, Little Audrey's fish started to look a little pale and drawn. And Little Audrey's potted plant looked droopy and dry.

"Then everything around Little Audrey started to dry up. Little Audrey's plant was curled and brown. Little Audrey's fish gasped to breathe in only a thimbleful of water.

"Little Audrey had saved a glass of water. She ran over the parched ground toward her fish and her potted, plant holding the glass in front of her and saying 'Here, here!' But then she tripped and dropped the glass, and the water ran out just out of reach of her friends.

"So Little Audrey went to the Rainmaker and begged for the rain to start again. But the Rainmaker refused. 'You said for it not to rain again, ever and ever!' He crossed his arms over his chest."

"What did Little Audrey do?"

"She sang," said the Soupster. "She sang so sweetly and with so much of her heart that she made the Rainmaker cry. She sang 'April Showers.' And the Rainmaker's tears grew greater and greater till they cascaded past his beard and down his chest and fell to the earth as wonderful, cooling rain."

"Wow," said the child. "I'll never ask for it to not be October or for the rain to stop. But is it okay to ask to make the raindrops just a little smaller?"

DID YOU KNOW

that October 11th is National Coming Out Day?

Thirty-two years ago, on the anniversary of the National March on Washington for Lesbian and Gay Rights, we first observed National Coming Out Day as a reminder that one of our most basic tools is the power of coming out. One out of every two Americans has someone close to them who is gay or lesbian. For transgender people, that number is only one in ten. Coming out – whether it is as lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender or queer – STILL MATTERS. When people know someone who is LGBTQ, they are far more likely to support equality under the law. Beyond that, our stories can be powerful to each other.
