Our Town April 11, 2013

The Soupster contemplates the future.

The Soupster sipped a frothy, fizzy, pinkish punch from a clear plastic cup. He and the friends who surrounded him raised their plastic cups to wish the best to Glenn the plumber, who was finally retiring.

One would think a man who had spent nearly 50 years with half his body crammed under a damp sink might be a little stiff in the joints, but not Glenn. Delighted that so many of his friends had come to see him "off," Glenn flitted effortlessly from one to next like a honeybee intoxicated by a field of flowers.

The only person the Soupster trusted more with his pipes than Glenn was the Soupster's former gastroenterologist, Dr. Berra. And Glenn was a close second. Over the decades that Glenn had kept the water flowing at Chez Soupster, he had dealt with exploding pipes, leaky water heaters and, worst of all, really, really rusty bolts holding the broken toilet seat on. And he had done so as cheerfully as he now visited with his guests.

"Gonna miss Glenn," thought the Soupster, "like I miss Dr. Berra," who had retired to Gig Harbor the previous year.

A lot of the people in the room were customer-friends of Glenn's, and a large portion of them practiced other trades. For "birds of a feather" reasons, many of them were near retirement age themselves.

The Soupster did a quick head count and realized with a start that he might soon be losing Burt, his auto mechanic, his dentist Linda, his bartender Tracey, and Big Leon -- who could fix anything. And that was only the people in the room!

It's common knowledge that people don't seem older to themselves – that they feel like they've always been the same person inside. Seeing the people around you get older can be more profound, especially if they perform a vital function. Who's going to fill your cavity or mix your martini?

The Soupster admitted that he felt some vertigo every time he dealt with an especially competent professional who was young enough to be his son, or worse. Once, pulled over for having expired plates, the Soupster got out of the car with all the confidence of an older and wiser man ready to forgive the impetuous youngster, except that the officer was right. The old Soupster's embarrassment was punishment enough, evidently, because he was let go with a warning.

In Our Town, the Soupster sometimes got the double dizzies when dealing with an authority figure he remembered as a little kid. The banker who signed the Soupster's loan was the same kid the Soupster saw win a Hoop Shoot in the 1980's.

Glenn's daughter had brought her small children to the party and a few of their friends had tagged along. The Soupster looked them over and wondered which of the little people might morph into authority figures of the future.

Would any of them shoot for the moon someday? Would any of them walk on the moon someday?

A plump, fresh faced three-year-old waddled up to the Soupster. "I want to be an astronaut!" she said.

Arctic Chiropractic Sitka: Chiropractic 101

Dr. Jeffrey Reinhardt

This is the first of a series of informational articles about chiropractic and how the services I provide can help you to eliminate your pain and improve your health. I am shocked at the number of patients I see who have been told -- and believe -- that they'll just have to learn to live with their pain. The fact is, in the majority of cases... it just isn't true.

I have helped thousands of patients, just like you, live their lives free of acute and chronic pain and illness. As a chiropractic physician, I help relieve your pain and improve your health by making small gentle adjustments to the bones of your spine. These adjustments improve the function of your nerve system -- which controls every function of your body. When performed under closely monitored treatment guidelines that include accurate testing protocols and outcome measures, the improvements to your health and painful conditions can be dramatic.

The relief of back pain, neck pain and headaches are just the starting points for most patients. The work we perform is also highly effective for pain in the major joints like your shoulders, elbows, knees, ankles, hips and even your TMJ pain. Call me today for your consultation to see if am able to help you. And remember... it's a visit, not an obligation.

READY FOR SPRING?

GREEN THUMB?

MY BEST HARVEST IN YEARS!

Sitka doesn't get much sunshine, but that doesn't mean that plants and flowers don't grow here • Some people grow their own food. Others grow plants for their beauty • In July, the Sitka Farmer's Market will open and some people will sell vegetables that they grow • A group of people are trying to grow apple trees in Sitka. Kelp is a good food, it can be used as a fertilizer and to protect plants from cold weather.
