The Soupster copes with unpleasant memories

"You hate my dog!" Laura overheard through the library stack. "You revile my pooch."

Laura the Librarian, with an armful of books, turned the corner, "Soupster?" she said "Is that you?"

"Uh, oh," the Soupster said. "Was I talking out loud?"

"Something about dogs?" said Laura. "Something about hating dogs?"

The Soupster reddened. "I am a confirmed animal lover," he said guiltily. "I actually like dogs third best, right after cats and Australians."

"Then why did you say you hated your dog?" said Laura.

"It's just an expression I use to control my bad thoughts," the Soupster answered.

"Stay there," said Laura, as she tipped the books in her arms onto a nearby empty shelf. She smoothed her blouse and gave her shoulders and head a little shake. "Now," she said to the Soupster, "Tell me what on Earth you are talking about."

The Soupster looked around to see if anyone else was listening. "Well," he said, lowering his voice, "When I say, `You hate my dog,' it really has nothing to do with dogs, or hatred, or even you, for that matter."

"You know, when a person has a memory of something that didn't turn out so well?" the Soupster went on. "And when they figure out what they should have done that would have worked out fifty times better? Or when they remember something somebody once said and only now can they think of the perfect thing they should have said back then?"

"I don't have these problems," said Laura.

"Consider yourself lucky, then," said the Soupster. "But my mind sometimes gets locked in kind of negative territory. My saying, `You hate my dog' breaks me loose."

"Tell me, Soupster," said Laura, "How did you come up with saying you hate your dog… er… my dog? Oh, you know what I mean."

"Well," said the Soupster, "It started a long time ago with the old saying, `Love me, love my dog.' That morphed into `Hate me, hate my dog.' Finally, just, `You hate my dog.'"

"Fascinating, your noggin," said Laura.

"Show me the noggin what ain't," said the Soupster.

"Well, your noggin, especially, ain't ain't," Laura said.

"You hate my dog!" said the Soupster.

"Wait just a minute," said Laura. "Didn't you just finish telling me that all this had nothing to do with me or dogs or hatred or dog hatred or anything?"

"Ooops," the Soupster said.

Who are the Masons?

Operative Masons lay stones and bricks – in 926 A.D. the Stone Masons joined with the knights in guilds called Freemasons.

In 1717 the first speculative Grand Lodge of Freemasons was formed in York, England.

A Mason is a man who believes in a Supreme Being. An atheist cannot become a Mason. Freemasons are Catholics, Protestants, Jews, Islamic, Buddhist or whichever religion they choose. Religion and politics are forbidden topics in the Lodge room. Freemasons are patriotic—they are sworn to support the government and to be good and peaceful citizens. Freemasons are good employees, businessmen, politicians and family men.

Freemasons give over $2 million a day to charity—mostly through the Shrine hospitals—22 of them for burned and crippled children. There is never a charge for medical care for children in the Shrine hospitals. All Shriners are Freemasons! The York Rite and Scottish Rite, youth groups such as DeMolay, Rainbow Girls and Job's Daughters, the Order of the Eastern Star and many other affiliated bodies are part of the Masonic family of Freemasons.

Good men as young as 18 years old can become a Freemason. But they must ask to join. We do not solicit members.

Freemasons have been in Sitka and S.E. Alaska for over 100 years.

Freemasons are your neighbors, your friends and even your pastors. Freemasons are an important part of your community as they support public schools, encourage public service and encourage each of their members to be active in their church.

Field of Dandelions

• Dandelions are not native to North America. They came aboard European ships arrivng in the New World. Today, dandelions are among the most common plants in all of North America.

• Although they are considered a weed, dandelions have many uses as both food and medicine.
• Dandelions are important plants for bees, butterflies and moths.
• The name "dandelion" comes from the French for "lion's tooth" referring to the plant's coarsely-toothed leaves.
• Italians use the leaves and unopened buds in soups and salads.
• Milky sap from the stalk is used as a mosquito repellant and to make warts go away.
• When dandelions become "puffballs" they are making seeds that float on the wind.The puffballs are also known as "clocks" or "wishies" Have you ever made a wish and blown the puffs?
