Our Town March 26, 2015

The Soupster compliments an off-road driver

The man loved Our Town's cool dampness, its outpost quality, its traditions which he had taken as his own. Despite being known as friendly, the man kept a lot secret. When asked how he'd come to be in Our Town, he would only say, "On the ferry, just like everybody else."

At another time in his life, the man had loved to drive his car for long distances alone. Herculean drives – 20-hour hauls taking him non-stop from Denver to San Francisco or Raleigh to Oklahoma City.

His first car had an 8-track where he played Beatles and Satchmo tapes for company. "Ramblin' Man." Later, a cassette player, then CDs.

The man still played CDs sometimes, it helped him when he felt compelled to overlook Our Town's physical limitations by driving several times from one end of the road all the way to the other, while pretending he was actually going somewhere.

Since he moved to Our Town, the man purchased beaters and lemons for cars, to disabuse himself of his desire to escape by a road that went nowhere. And then one day, he had the luck – good or bad – to inherit a nice, peppy, late-model car.

The man drove his new ride to the end of the road and felt, for the first time in a long time, the desire to drive further. He fought the urge.

He liked the new car – it had satellite radio and heated seats. The Soupster, among others, had complimented the man, as though he had lost weight. The man did feel vaguely… proud? Yes, he liked his new car. But ooh, that urge.

And then one day, as he drove north on the state highway, the urge won.

He passed a shuttered convenience store, then passed a private cruise ship dock. He felt in no way agitated. More like the calm one feels on the first steps of a long journey.

Past the ferry terminal he drove, and the last vestiges of Our Town disappeared into the forest. He saw the "End of Road" sign ahead of him. He closed his eyes for a split moment and wished that he could keep driving, keep driving. Keep driving.

And when he opened his eyes he saw a very familiar sight – the 24-hour SeaTac restaurant, 13 Coins. Late-model cars whizzed past on either side of him along the straight-as-an-arrow road festooned with motels and eateries. To his left were the elevated tracks of the new light rail by SeaTac Airport. The man and his peppy car worked their way up International Boulevard toward Seattle.

The man was confused. He pulled into the parking lot of a Denny's and went inside for coffee. He sat at the counter pondering his experience when a big trucker with a kind face sat down on the next stool.

The trucker looked just like the old actor Pat O'Brien, who often played priests. So the man told the trucker his whole story. "…and then there I was," the man told the trucker. "I mean, here I am."

The trucker was the non-judgmental type. His only comment was, "Wow. How are you going to get the car back home?"

The man was silent for a second. Oh, I'll probably put it on the ferry," he said. "Just like everybody else."

Art & Music

Sitka National Historical Park, in conjunction with Alaska Geographic, is inviting local artists to submit designs for a 2015 Sitka National Historical Park T-Shirt. The purpose of the contest is to design a fashionable and artful limited edition t-shirt that captures the spirit of the park, its resources or activities. Designs may include but are not limited to Northwest Coast formline or totemic art, the Battle of 1804, Russian America, the Indian River or the artist's relationship with the park. The design must be suitable for T-shirt transfer and is limited to 3 colors. A panel of judges comprised of representatives from both Sitka National Historical Park and Alaska Geographic will select the winning entry. A $300 honorarium will be awarded for the selected design. Designs and artist contact information (including telephone and email address) can be dropped off at the Visitor Center or may be sent to: Sitka National Historical Park, Attn: 2015 T-Shirt , 103 Monastery St., Sitka, AK 99835. Designs must be received by April 2 and the winner will be notified by April 7. Please do not send originals. Ad#398550

Health & Wellness

Even though the open enrollment period to sign up for health insurance ended Feb. 15, individuals and families that did not have health insurance in 2014 and had to pay the shared responsibility tax fine will have one more chance to enroll. A special enrollment period from Mar.15 - April 30 allows a second, and final chance for people to sign up for insurance that did not understand the tax consequences for being uninsured. SouthEast Alaska Regional Health Consortium (SEARHC) is available to support all Southeast Alaska residents with signing up for the Health Insurance Marketplace, the federally run program that helps insurance be more affordable. After Apr. 30 you will not be able to purchase health coverage unless you meet special enrollment requirements, and you may pay a very high tax penalty next year. Signing up for insurance during this 45 day period will ensure your coverage starts May 1. There are several ways to apply for health coverage on the Health Insurance Marketplace; through individual assistance with SEARHC (free service to everyone), by calling the Marketplace toll-free, 24 hour line at 1-800-318-2596 to enroll over the phone , going to www.healthcare.gov and enrolling online, or call-

HERRING EGGS

CROCODILE EGG

TINY HUMMINGBIRD EGGS IN A NEST

Birds, reptiles and fish lay eggs, and even dinosaurs laid eggs! Most of the eggs we see every day are chicken eggs • White eggs come from chickens with white earlobes • Brown eggs come from chickens with brown earlobes • A hen requires 24-26 hours to produce an egg • If you put a fresh egg in the microwave aand heat it, the egg may explode!
