The Soupster ponders alone time

The Soupster cozied into his first class seat. Using his upgrade from Seattle was a great idea. The reunion of his writing class had been interesting, and now his eyes drooped as he thumbed through the magazine, waiting for take-off. Apologies for the hold-up came from the loudspeaker, as two guys walked in and took the seats behind the Soupster.

"Hmmn…looks like they're out of a Patagonia catalog," was his thought as take-off commenced.

"You must have clout somewhere to get a 737 to wait for you!" said a deep voice from behind.

'Well, this trip is costing me a bundle. Seems my wife equates ten days fishing in Alaska with ten days in Paris. Say, Jake, how do you get away with it? You've been going fishing every year."

The Soupster's ears perked up. This sounded like a story - it already had politics and economics with overtones of women's lib.

There was a pause and finally the deep voice replied.

"Leland, you were smart to deal with your fishing right up front. Remember that trip around the world Susan and I took a few years ago?"

"Ha-ha, don't I just? I still get, 'How come Jake and Susan can afford it and not us?'"

"Well," said Jake, "my story started when I had to go up to Prudhoe Bay with that spill settlement. It was thought a little fishing stopover might be in order. Then, Susan got all excited about meeting up with me. Instead of saying it was an all-guy fishing trip, I dropped the subject. So, she thought it was just work."

Jake mused, "I had so much fun with those guys - fishing and drinking and being out on the water. I kept going every year - Susan thought it was all business. That worked for about five years. Then, one weekend, at a barbecue, that damned Al Krankins started in about the fish."

"Where'd you get this fish? Tastes like real wild salmon!" Blah, blah. "You have friends in Alaska?"

Jake's voice got wistful. "Susan gave me 'the look.' I felt the old bank account shrinking. But, I like a peaceful life, so three months tripping around the world was a small price to pay. Now we negotiate in advance. Susan's on a New York shopping trip with our daughters."

The Soupster marveled - was this calculated negotiation a feature of all marriages? It sounded exhausting – not for the first time, the Soupster thanked his stars that he had only himself to answer to. He drifted off, thinking of the nice, quiet evening he would soon be enjoying.

Finally, home! The Soupster walked into the terminal. There was his buddy Sheila, come to give him a ride. He gave her a big hug. And then, the shouts started.

"Hey, Uncle Soupster!!"

"Hi, you old dog!," said Sheila. "Guess what - my family came up for a surprise visit, and the best part is, they get to stay for a whole week! Will you barbecue fish for us all tonight?"

sign of precancerous polyps or colon cancer. The FIT is done in the privacy of one's home with a kit from a medical provider. Since vitamins and foods do not affect the FIT, there are no drug or dietary restrictions. Even those with no family history of colorectal cancer or other risk factors such as obesity, smoking, or poor diet can get colon cancer. Getting screened is critical to finding colon cancer early. Discovering and removing precancerous polyps can even prevent people from ever getting the disease. "SEARHC is excited to promote this simple test as a way of bringing vital health screening to all Sitkans, whether they are patients at Mt. Edgecumbe Hospital on a regular basis or not." said Martha Pearson, Director of Health Promotion for SEARHC. All Sitka residents age 50, and older who meet certain, medical, criteria are eligible to receive this free test. The results will be shared with the individual and his or her primary care provider. For more information about getting tested, Sitkans can call 966-8438. Ad#243556

Works has been working on improvements to and reconstruction of the Cross Trail since last spring. Using grants the City received from the State Department of Transportation and the Federal Lands Access Program, a Rasmuson grant and Sitka Trail Works donations, 1.25 miles of new trail is now complete. The old Cross Trail has been upgraded to an 8' wide multimodal pathway standard, from the High School to Yaw Drive and a separated path was constructed along Yaw Drive to the Indian River Trailhead parking lot. If walkers park in the Indian River/Cross Trail Trailhead parking lot off Indian River Road, the separated path now starts across the road at Peter Simpson Drive and runs along Yaw Drive to the main Cross Trail. Sitka Trail Works has begun construction of Phase 5 of the Cross Trail Multimodal Pathway. Approximately one mile of multimodal trail will be constructed to replace the lower portion of Gavan Hill Trail. The new section of the Cross Trail will share a trailhead with the Gavan Hill Trail at the end of Baranof Street. The Phase 5 pathway will provide access to the Cross Trail and Gavan Trail from downtown and surrounding neighborhoods. The lower part of Gavan Hill Trail will be abandoned. During construction heavy equipment will be using neighborhood streets. Trail construction materials are being staged at the end of Pherson Street and adjacent to the City cemetery. Residents are asked to "excuse our mess", truck traffic and noise during construction and avoid the staging area. Construction will be complete in the fall. For further information, please contact Lynne Brandon, CBS Parks and Recreation, at 747-1852 or Sitka Trail Works at 747-7244. Ad#807557

The residents of Sitka no longer have to wait for the Household Hazardous Waste Event to recycle fluorescent bulbs or electronic waste! The Transfer Station on Jarvis Street is now collecting these items all year round to eliminate them from the waste stream! Fluorescent bulbs can now be taken to the transfer station on Saturdays to be recycled from 12:00 pm to 1:00 pm. There is a charge of $.50 a bulb and it will be charged to the resident's utility bill. This is for residential customers only. Commercial businesses must call Alaska Pacific Environmental Services at 907-747-5669 to set up an appointment. Electronic Waste can be recycled at the transfer station at any time, all year long. Simply take your electronics to the Transfer Station and put it in the electronics bin. There is no charge for this service. Northwest Coast Art & Language

The University of Alaska Southeast, Sitka Campus is offering a full schedule of NW Coast Arts and Language classes this summer. These outstanding courses are in most cases in a concentrated workshop format, easy to squeeze into the busy summer activities, and of special interest to high school students who want an enriching experience for college credit. Beginning June 22, world-famous Haida basket weaver Delores Churchill will return to UAS to share her skills and experience. ART 282/382/482 NW Coast Basketry will custom-tailor the masterful instruction to the student's previous skill level. The goal for each student will be to complete an entire project during the allotted time – every weeknight from 6pm to 9pm, June 22 through July 1, plus Saturday June 27 from 9am to 3pm. Students will work at their own pace on a project of their choosing, such as a hat or basket. Weaving materials are available from Delores for a fee. NW Coast Engraving - ART 280/380/480 – Beginning June 30 and continuing through July 21, local artist Dave Galanin will teach Engraving at whatever skill level students have already attained. Each Tuesday and Thursday evening from 6pm to 9pm, Dave will share his mastery of silver carving techniques. Students will learn to design their own artwork,
