Our Town June 30, 2016

Originally published July 14, 2011

The Soupster hears relatively bad puns

It wasn't easy to make the Soupster feel like the stuffy serious one, but Cousin Rob had always had just that effect on him.

"The great ferry Malaspina," Rob pronounced, as soon as the first-time visitor to Our Town stepped off the ramp to meet up with Cousin Soupster. "The name derives from the Russian word for `bad spine' right?"

"Actually, Malaspina is named after a glacier which is named after an Italian explorer named Alessandro," said the Soupster.

"Then why isn't the ferry named `Alessandro?'" asked Cousin Rob.

"That's his first name," said the Soupster.

"Anyway," said Rob. "It's so good to be in Alaska. `Alaska,' that's probably Italian, too. Italian for `everyone should ask.'"

The Soupster had been trapped in this routine before. His parents were very close friends with Rob's. Cousin Rob was eight years older and, when enlisted as the Soupster's babysitter, would torture him with bad puns. "Protuberance," he remembered Rob saying, "It's Latin for `professional potato-eating insect.'"

They passed the spiral white warning sirens along HPR and the Soupster heard himself falsely answering Cousin Rob's innocent question of "What are those?"

"They're fluorescent streetlights," the Soupster jived. "They save a bunch of electricity and they last five times as long as a regular streetlight."

They passed Maksoutoff St., which Rob guessed was Russian for "to force a businessman to remove his suit."

At the airport, Cousin Rob had such crazy definitions for everything that the Soupster lost it.

When Rob pointed to the flashing yellow light the airline used to tell passengers their luggage was coming, the Soupster said, "It's a tsunami warning beacon, Cousin Rob. This is important. If you ever see it go off, start running for high ground."

"Tsunami, that reminds me," said Cousin Rob and asked directions to the men's room.

As he waited for his cousin to return, the Soupster thought about how churlish he had been. Cousin Rob was just excited and interested in Our Town and who wouldn't be? The Soupster just needed to calm down and play the good host.

As if on cue, the rotating beacon starting spinning, spilling a yellow strobe light on everyone and everything. Cousin Rob ran up and grabbed the Soupster's arm.

"Tsunami," said Rob. "A Boston term meaning `take Norman to court.'

Like to write an Our Town? It must be 450-500 words long & closely connected with the life of Sitkans. The Soupster must make an appearance in the story – even if briefly. If we run your story, we'll pay you $50.

To submit: Email the story to shop@sitkasoup.com and put "Our Town" in the Subject line. Or call: 747-7595*

The Alaska Marine Safety Education Association (AMSEA) is conducting a six-day Marine Safety Instructor Training (MSIT) at the Public Safety Training Academy in Sitka, Alaska, from Sept 19-24,. This is an intensive train-the-trainer course that prepares individuals to effectively teach cold-water survival procedures, use of marine safety equipment, and vessel safety drills. Taught by experienced mariners, the MSIT provides practical, hands-on experience in survival equipment use and procedures. Free to commercial fishermen on approval, thanks to support from the U.S. Coast Guard. The cost for all others is $875 for AMSEA members
