Our Town February 22, 2018

I was cornered! I had to be quick. I grabbed my books and papers and scurried out of my cozy winter spot in the library. The new glass walls made it hard to be invisible.

Talking Joe was heading straight towards me. Joe was long and lanky and words spewed out of him like a manic fountain pen. Like a lot of Our Towners this time of year, he hunted down people to visit with.

An interesting man, Talking Joe. Curious and self-educated, he looked at old things in new ways and gave you ideas to mull over for days. He often sounded like the speculative science talks on the radio.

"Hi, Soupster!" Joe hailed just when I thought I was in the clear. "Soupster, have you ever noticed - Our Town is yellow?"

"Yellow? Do you mean faint of heart? Scared? Cowardly?"

"No, no, Soupster. Just yellow. Well, maybe orangey-red, but it looks like a big 'ole pumpkin patch."

"How so, Joe?"

"Well, Soupster. It runs the gamut from burnt umber to the palest yellow to rooftop red."

"Burnt umber? What is that, Joe?"

"Umber, I've read, is a natural brown earth pigment with oxides. When heated, the color becomes more intense and is called burnt umber."

"And then, Soupster, have you noticed we have miles and miles of yellow 'No Parking' curbs? How do they pick these colors? Do they discuss them at assembly or is it just the paint on sale that month?"

"I don't know, Joe, maybe folks are just seeking brightness. In deep winter here, the forests, mountains and oceans are mostly black, topped by dark gray clouds. Maybe people are trying to add an artificial sun to the landscape."

"Yeah, Soupster, we all need variety – for example, I have to admit St. Michael's Cathedral is the little non-pumpkin jewel of downtown."

"Good things to think about, Joe. Anything else on your mind today?" I asked as I strolled toward the silent sanctuary of my truck.

"Oh, all kinds of things. Like why are the streets so quiet at night? I hardly ever hear anyone cussing or yelling anymore. Maybe it's too cold to make noise."

Joe seemed more lonesome than usual today. Ever since his wife passed, he's been trying to reconnect with friends and neighbors. She was definitely the social glue of the pair. Things got even harder for Joe when his card-playing buddy Ralph moved south to be near grandkids. Talking Joe needed a listener now more than ever.

Sometimes, we all just need to shut up and listen better, and maybe the season will seem kinder and warmer.

"Okay, Joe, see you around," I said as I started my engine.

"Soupster?"

"Yes, Joe?"

"I was wondering - why does our town have so many flat roofs? Just asking," I heard him say.

I pulled away from the yellow curb, slowed down and called back, "Get in the truck, Joe, and tell me what you think about the flat roofs."

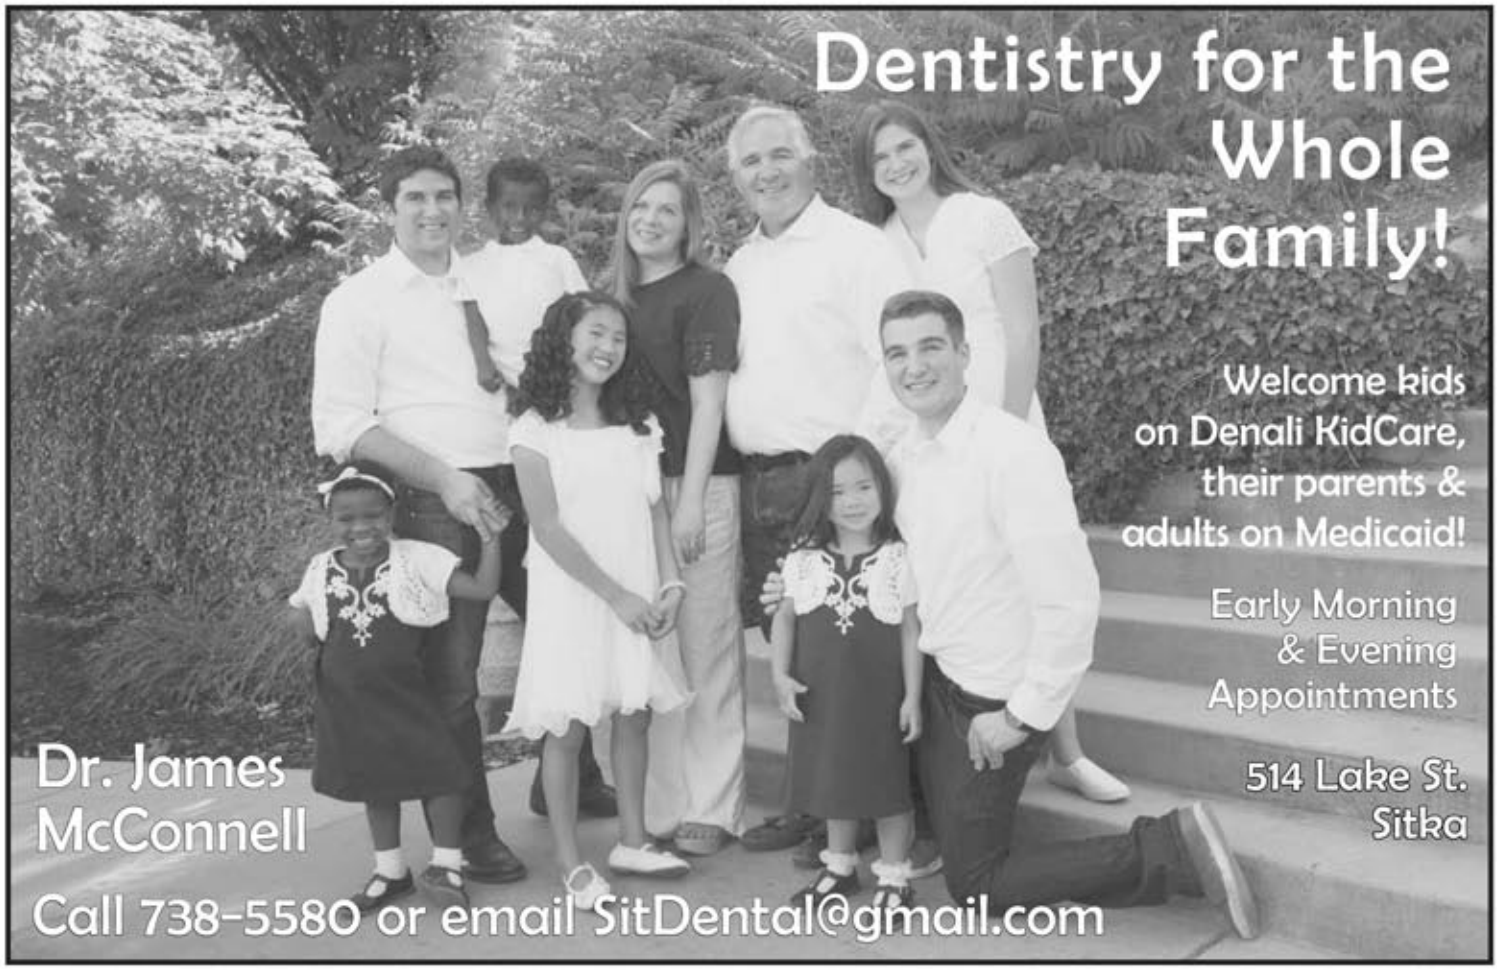
Sitka Local Foods Network launches Sitka food business innovation contest

A sampling of current food products grown, manufactured or processed in Sitka

Do you think you have a great idea for a food business or product from Sitka? The Sitka Local Foods Network is launching the inaugural Sitka food business innovation contest in an effort to spark local food entrepreneurs so we can make more local food available to residents and visitors. This contest will provide two $1,500 kicker prizes — one for established food businesses and one for start-up businesses (no older than two years) — to help entrepreneurs launch or expand their food businesses. The contest is open to food businesses and individuals making and selling food products in Sitka, Alaska. All food business ideas must be geared toward getting more locally grown, harvested and/or produced food into the Sitka marketplace through sales in grocery stores, the Sitka Food Co-Op, the Sitka Farmers Market, restaurants, or individual marketing (such as a community supported agriculture/CSA or community supported fisheries/CSF program). "The Sitka Local Foods Network's mission is to get more locally harvested and produced food into the diets of Southeast Alaskans," said Charles Bingham, Sitka Local Foods Network board president. "For the past decade we've offered a entrepreneurs a chance to sell their produce, bread and fish at the Sitka Farmers Market, grown produce to sell at the market through St. Peter's Fellowship Farm, and provided a garden education program to residents.



We think this contest is the next step toward getting more local food into the Sitka marketplace." Participants in this contest are eligible and encouraged to enter other food business innovation contests, such as the Path to Prosperity or Symphony of Seafood contests. All participants retain the proprietary rights to their products and ideas. This contest is open to new and existing food businesses in Sitka. Student businesses (such as those fostered by Junior Achievement or similar programs) are welcome. There is a small $25 entry fee for this contest. All participants (business and individual) must complete and submit our contest entry form by 5 p.m. on Friday, April 6, 2018 (by snail mail so it arrives before the deadline to Sitka Local Foods Network, Food Business Innovation Contest Entries, 408-D Marine Street, Sitka, Alaska, 99835, or by email with the Subject Line of "Food Business Innovation Contest Entries" to sitkalocalfoodsnetwork@gmail.com). Submitting a business plan (up to 20 pages) is recommended, but not required. Our entry form will have room for you to describe your food business idea in a few paragraphs, but submitting a business plan will give you more room to outline your plans for funding and marketing the idea and will help your overall score. Judging will be based on how your food business idea provides new local food options in Sitka, how novel is your food business idea, how feasible is your food business (can it make a profit and be sustainable), and how professional is your presentation. At some time about the third week of April, the Sitka Local Foods Network will host a pitch presentation where judges will interview the contest entrants and try samples of the food products. Our judging panel will score your presentation and entry form based on how your idea has a measurable impact on providing local food in Sitka (25%), has the potential for commercialization (25%), provides new employment in Sitka (25%) and fills a need in the Sitka marketplace (25%). If we find additional sponsors, we may add additional prizes and categories (such as fish or farm). Depending on the number of entries and interest of the participants, we may host a reception where contestants can demonstrate their products to Sitka residents. If the reception happens, there will be a chance for people to vote on their favorite products with the winner receiving the People's Choice Award (this will be separate than the two main prizes selected by our judging panel). We are hoping to find a sponsor for the People's Choice Award. Ad#6835a7

Mt. Edgecumbe Hospital keeps newborns safe with Hugs and Kisses®

Implementation of Hugs Wi-Fi Infant Protection Solution along with its Kisses Mother/Infant Matching provides additional security, increased safety, and improved patient experience Mt. Edgecumbe Hospital (MEH) recently installed and deployed the Hugs Wi-Fi Infant Protection solution, along with the matching mother/infant component of the Hugs system; Kisses® Mother as an additional layer of security in its Labor and Delivery Department. The Hugs technology is a comprehensive infant security system that protects newborns against the risk of abduction not only in the Labor and Delivery Department but anywhere in the hospital covered by Wi-Fi. Each infant wears a tiny Hugs Wi-Fi tag on his or her ankle attached with a special tamper-detecting band. Protection of the baby begins immediately once the tag is attached. The Hugs system provides some unique benefits including hospital-wide infant security by monitoring all exits. The status and location of infants can be tracked anywhere within the hospital's Wi-Fi coverage, and exits remain protected even if communication to the hospital's server is temporarily interrupted. And, infants detected outside the Labor and Delivery unit with no record of a staff member transporting the baby to another area of the hospital automatically triggers an alarm. MEH also added the Kisses® component of the Hugs system to match newborn babies to their mothers automatically to further augment security for each infant. Each mother receives a Kisses tag which is programmed to be "bonded" with her baby's Hugs tag to wear around her wrist. Whenever the two tags meet anywhere in the hospital, the Hugs tag checks for a proper match to the individually programmed Kisses® tag worn by the baby's mother. When a match is verified, the tags make a specific sound letting staff know the infant is with his or her mother. Charles Clement, SouthEast Alaska Regional Health Consortium President, and CEO said, "SEARHC takes our patients' safety, security, and protection seriously, and protecting the infants born at Mt. Edgecumbe Hospital is critically important. Providing Hugs and Kisses as an additional safeguard to the newborns in our care is just one of the recent upgrades we have implemented at MEH, and our staff continues to seek innovative solutions, educational opportunities, and technology to advance the medical care and experience we provide to our patients." ### Ad#1065a7 shows March 10th. Go to www.sitkaartscouncil.org. for complete information and registration form or email Jeff at jbudd3500@gmail.com. Important dates: March 9th dress rehearsal at the Centennial Building. Two shows - Sat March 10th, 3pm matinee and 7pm evening show. Registration is due February 25th with music, the registration form has that information, plus your 75 words or less, and 2 1/2 minutes max on the runway. Read the application carefully. Also consider wearing one of your past pieces in the show or finding a model for them. We are excited about year number 10 - the idea is to celebrate the 10th year of Sitka Wearable Art. We are also looking for pieces to display in the shops downtown - please let Jeff know how to get those if you have any to display or any questions Ad#1055a7
