The Soupster gets to hear a nine-year-old's point of view

The Soupster was talking on the phone with an old acquaintance of his, who had worked at the City Offices for many years. It was the weekend, and they were chatting just before their respective supper deliveries arrived. His friend Sharon & her granddaughter, who lived with her, were getting pizza, and the Soupster was getting sushi.

Suddenly, Sharon said, "Oh-oh, there's the doorbell – I have to answer it. Zeylinn, please come and talk to the Soupster while I go answer the door. That's a big help!"

Soupster: Hi, Zeylinn! Thanks for talking to me. I have known your grandma for many years. She was just telling me about how you have been attending school remotely.

Zeylinn: Yeah, I just finished last week. Whew, it was hard sometimes.

Soupster: So, you are nine, and you just finished – what - third grade? Who was your teacher?

Zeylinn: His name is Mr. Burrows and he's really nice. It's not his fault – the remote school is just difficult. Sometimes it is hard to get online for the morning meeting. And hard to stay online.

Soupster: Yeah, I know what you mean.

Zeylinn: I usually like school and really like reading, but the online reading we had to do was hard, because a lot of the time the questions didn't make sense. They didn't match up to what we were reading about, and the answers weren't in the reading.

Soupster: I get that – when I was in Middle School, we had some assigned reading which was kind of boring and the questions didn't make much sense, either. Normally, what's your favorite part of school?

Zeylinn: Music and Library. I like all kinds of music and I play guitar and keyboard.

Soupster: Oh, that's cool. I'll bet you miss Library, but you still get to pick out books and read, though?

Zeylinn: Oh, yeah, we just had a Book Fair on the last day before Spring Break, and I got three books – well, comics, actually – I am really getting into comics. Two of them are Babysitter's Club and the other one is called "Guts." But they're all by the same person – here, I'll read you her name, "R – a – l – n – a. T- e – l – g – e – e – m – e – l – e – r. Raina Telgemeier."

Soupster: Oh, it's funny – I have heard about her. She tells stories and draws pictures from her own life. She lives in San Francisco. I guess they have to stay home there as much, or even more, than we do in Our Town. Yup, it's been hard, sometimes. What are you planning for this summer?

Zeylinn: Well, sleeping in for one thing. And then, we're probably going to get a pool and go to the beach. Oh, and I really LOVE art – I do lots of pictures with watercolors and pastels. Well, there's my grandma, I better go help her with the pizza – nice talking to you, Soupster!

Soupster: You, too, Zeylinn. My sushi just got here. Say bye to your grandma for me?!

system more resilient. Food is about where it comes from and the connections it creates between people and places along the way. Join us on a journey to explore and transform our food system by being part of the Local Foods Challenge. Your challenge from May to September is to deepen your connection to the local food system by increasing your level of engagement for each category: Gather, Grow, Hunt, Fish, Preserve/Store, Cook/Eat, Compost/Recover, Share, Celebrate/Appreciate, Buy. The Local Foods Challenge is taking place on the ancestral and unceded territories of the Tlingit, Haida and Tsimshian Peoples. We recognize the deep ways of knowing and relationships with local foods held by the Indigenous Peoples of this region and are grateful for their stewardship of these lands and waters since time immemorial and today.

DID YOU KNOW

that at times bikes have been seen as vehicles of protest?

Bicycles are powerful things—inexpensive, versatile tools that can be used by dissenters to sneak up and speed off, to organize and mobilize and elude. Posts on social media described N.Y.P.D. officers violently seizing bikes from peaceful Black Lives Matter demonstrators. One of Adolf Hitler's first acts upon assuming power, in 1933, was to criminalize cycling unions, which were associated with anti-Nazi political parties. The bicycle's reputation as an agent of change is based above all on its role in the turn-of-the-century women's movement. 'Many a woman,' Elizabeth Cady Stanton said, 'is riding to the suffrage on a bicycle.'

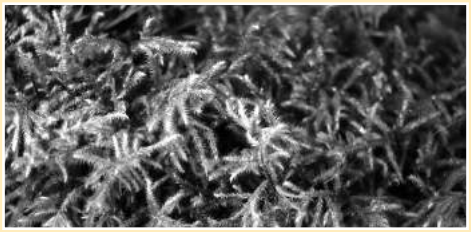
Mosses, Lichens & Fungi

Fungi, lichens and mosses are three groups of living things that share some common features and may sometimes have relationships with one another, but are actually very different "things."



MOSSES are plants! They don't have flowers or seeds, but they do produce spores, as fungi do.

Mosses don't have roots; they absorb water and nutrients through their leaves - this is why mosses live in dampish environments. Some mosses can only live where it is damp all the time, others adapt to living in drier alpine climates and sand dunes!

LICHENS are two organisms – a fungus and an algae – living together in symbiosis. (A mutually helpful relationship)

The algae are photosynthetic (make food) which helps the fungus. The fungus provides a place for the algae to live. Lichens can be found where other organisms cannot live, including bare rocks, sand & rusty metal!

Lichens have also been used for making dyes, from yellow, brown, green, red, purple and orange!

Devil's Matchstick Lichen

FUNGI are NOT plants. Fungi are NOT animals (like bacteria). Fungi are their own KINGDOM.

Fungi are super important living organisms – they break down and consume dead matter. They are some of the recyclers, or decomposers in ecosystems, including ours.

Fungi can be microscopic, or HUGE! The largest living thing on earth is a 2,400 year old fungus called a honey mushroom. It covers 2,200 acres in Oregon!
